PREFACE.

I. Some remarks on the Kannaḍa Language.

The Kannaḍa or Canarese Language, which is the subject of the present Dictionary, is one of the vernaculars of Southern India that have sprung from a common origin and form a distinct family of tongues, viz. that of the now[1] so-called Draviḍa (or Drâviḍa), of which Tamiḷ, Malayâḷa, Tĕlugu and Tuḷu are the other principal representatives.

Kannaḍa is spoken throughout the plateau of Mysore, in the Southern Mahratta country, in some of the western districts of the Nijam's dominions, and to a considerable extent in North and South Canara on the western coast. The number of people by whom Kannaḍa is spoken may be estimated at about ten millions.

It includes three chief dialects—classical, mediæval, and modern. The first or Ancient Kannaḍa is quite uniform, and shows an extraordinary amount of polish and refinement. It has to the present time been preserved in several works written by Jaina scholars, and appears to have been in common use for literary purposes from at least the 10th to the middle of the 13th century. Its principal characteristics are the elaborate and highly artificial čampû composition,—strict adherence to the use of now more or less disused case- and tense-signs (that towards the end of the mentioned period were fixed in grammatical treatises) and to the rules of syntax, —perspicuity resulting therefrom,—the use of classical Saṁskṛita (also specifically Jaina) words in their unaltered form whenever desirable or necessary as an aid in composition and that of a conventionally received number of Tadbhavas (Saṁskṛita terms changed to suit the tongue of the Kannaḍa people),—the proper distinction between the letters ḷ, ṛ, ḻ, ḷ and ṟ,—alliteration carefully based also on this distinction,—and lastly pleasing euphonic junction of letters.

1) Since the publication of Dr. Caldwell's Comparative Grammar of the South-Indian Family of Languages, i. e. since about thirty-seven years.

After the Ancient dialect the Mediæval Kannaḍa began to appear as contained in the poetry of Šaiva and Liṅgâyta authors. It is, as a rule, written in any one of the Shaṭpada metres, is somewhat negligent as to the use of suffixes and the rules of syntax and therefore occasionally ambiguous, uses a few new suffixes, contains a number of Tadbhavas not sanctioned by previous authors, has entirely lost the letter ḷ (using r or l in its stead), and frequently changes the letter p of the present or future verbal suffix[1] and an initial p into h. Its period terminates at about the end of the 15th century. It is, however, to be observed that also after that time several works were written in the Mediæval as well as in the Classical dialect and style.

From about the 16th century Mediæval Kannaḍa gradually got the character of the language of the present day or of Modern Kannaḍa, which transition is seen especially in the poetry of the Vaishṇavas that dates and prevails from that time. Several ancient verbs and nouns fell into disuse, the letter ṛ began to be discarded, at least so far as regards its proper position in alliteration, words borrowed from Mahratta and Hindustani came into use, more frequent omission of suffixes took place, etc.

The third or Modern dialect comprises the present Kannaḍa of prose writings and common conversation. Of these the first have two branches, one being tales, school-books and letters, and the other business-language (especially that of courts of justice). The first branch differs from the second chiefly in so far as it is more exact in the use of inflexional terminations and less abounding in Hindustani and Mahratti. The language of ordinary conversation (excepting that of the educated classes) may be called a union of the two branches that is less particular in the choice of words, arbitrary about the use of suffixes, and at the same time full of vulgarisms. Many words of the Modern dialect also are Saṁskṛita, especially such as are abstract, religious or scientific terms. The ancient form of the present tense has been changed, most verbal suffixes have been somewhat altered, a few of the suffixes of nouns and pronouns have ceased to be used, many verbs, nouns, and particles have become obsolete, and other verbs and nouns (based on existing roots) have been formed; but in spite of this, of the introduction of much Hindustani and Mahratti, of the lack of refinement, etc. the Modern dialect is essentially one with the Ancient and Mediæval. It is however not uniform, but more or less varies according to localities.

II. Enumeration of the various works, etc. consulted in compiling the present Dictionary.[1]

a) Works written in the Ancient dialect (all in verse, except Nos. 2 and 3).[2]

1. Pampa's Âdi-purâṇa* (of A. D. 941).
2. A commentary in Kannaḍa prose on Halâyudha's Abhidhânaratnamâlâ (of about A. D. 1100? or of about 1000, and written by Halâyudha himself?).
3. Nâḍirâḍi's Nâḍirâḍîya, a commentary in Kannaḍa prose on the Amarakôśa (of about A. D. 1158? The two MSS. of Mḍb. used for this work may have been touched, as they contain some mediæval forms; or did such forms already exist before the mediæval period, but were excluded from classical poetry? Cf. No. 10, and see Nr. s. Abbreviations).
4. Argaḷa's Čandraprabha-purâṇa* (of A. D. 1189).
5. Lîlâvatî-prabandha* (either by Argaḷa or Nêmičandra, of about A. D. 1200).
6. Nâgavarma's Kâvyâvalôkana* (of about A. D. 1200).
7. Nâgavarma's Čhandas (of about A. D. 1200).
8. Kêšîrâja's Šabdamaṇidarpaṇa (of about A. D. 1225).
9. Abhinava Pampa's (Nâgačandra's) Râmačandra-purâṇa* (of about A. D. 1225?).
10. Abhinaya Pampa's Jinamunitanaya* (it contains some mediæval forms, and may have been written for the use of every day life without laying claim to classicality; cf. remark to No. 3).
11. Šâstrasâra* (date of the Jaina author unknown).
12. Harîšvara's Girijâkalyâṇa* (of about A. D. 1290; it is in the čampû metre, whereas Harîšvara's verses on Šiva's hosts are in ragaḷês).
13. Bômma's Čaturâsya-nighaṇṭu (of about A. D. 1300? It is composed in Kandas, and exists in two recensions, marked I. and II.).
14. Šabdasâra. (The words of this small but useful vocabulary were originally included in verses, but in the MS. used for this Dictionary are carefully given in prose; it may belong to the 14th century.)
15. Shaḍakshara's Râjašêkhara-vilâsa* (of A. D. 1657).
16. Shaḍakshara's Vṛishabhêndra-vijaya* (of A. D. 1671).
17. Shaḍakharâ's Šabarašaṅkara-vilâsa* (of about A. D. 1680).
18. Rudrabhaṭṭa's Jagannâtha-vijaya* (of about A. D. 1680?).

b) Works written in the Mediæval dialect. (The metre, except that of Nos. 1, 4 and 12, is the Shaṭpadi of Ragaḷê of the period.)

1. Sômêšvara's Šataka* (in vṛittas, of about A. D. 1300).
2. Bhîma's Basava-purâṇa (of A. D. 1369).
3. Abhinava Maṅgarâja's Nighaṇṭu (of A. D. 1398).
4. Dêvôttama's Nânârtharatnâkara (in vṛittas, of about A. D. 1400?).

1) In the following list of the native works (a, b, c) used for the present Dictionary an asterisk put to a work indicates that not all the words occurring in it are included in this Dictionary. A few of the works, for want of time, have been only slightly consulted.

2) Regarding their dates cf. Nâgavarma's Canarese Prosody, Mangalore, 1875, and Mr. B. L. Rice's Bhaṭṭâkalaṅkadêva's Karṇâṭakaśabdânuśâsana, Bangalore, 1890.

5. Liṅga's Kabbigara Kaypiḍi (of about A.D. 1480).
6. Čâmarasa's Prabhuliṅga-lîlâ* (of about A.D. 1460).
7. Tôṭada Ârya's Šabdamañjari (of about A.D. 1480).
8. Kumâravyâsa's Bhârata* (of about A.D. 1508).
9. Vaishṇava and other Dâsapadas* (in ragaḷè, from about A.D. 1530 to 1800).
10. Virûpâksha's Čannabasava-purâṇa* (of A.D. 1585).
11. Kumâravâlmîki's Râmâyaṇa* (of about A.D. 1590).
12. Bhârata-nighaṇṭu (in Kandas, of about A.D. 1600).
13. Čikka Naṅjêša's Râghavâṅka-čaritra* (of about A.D. 1650).
14. Nijaguṇa's Kaivalyapaddhati* (in ragaḷè, of about A.D. 1650).
15. Raṅganâtha's Anubhavâmṛita* (of about A.D. 1680).
16. Lakshmîša's Jaimini-bhârata* (of about A.D. 1760).
17. Sarvajña's Pada* (in ragaḷè, of about A.D. 1800).
18. Čidânandâvadhûta's Jñânasindhu* (of about A.D. 1820).

c) Works written in the Modern dialect (prose).

1. Gaṅgâdhara Maḍivâḷêšvara's Canarese Vocabulary, Translation, Exhibition, Belgaum, printed at Bangalore, 1869. (It is based on the Rev. W. Reeve's Carnâṭaka and English Dictionary and the Amarakôša. Gaṅgâdhara, not knowing that Mr. Reeve's work contains many obscure words that are inserted in it as Ancient Kannaḍa words, but do not exist at all in the Kannaḍa language, selected such words and explained them according to Mr. Reeve. So far Gaṅgâdhara's work is useless, but becomes valuable for the explanation in South-Mahratta Kannaḍa of most of the terms of the Amarakôša.)

2. Siddhânti Subrahmaṇya Šâstri's new interpretation of the Amarakôša, Bangalore, 1872. (Its Kannaḍa is not always correct, and its explanations are occasionally questionable.)

3. Gururâva Viṭhala Môharè's Šabdasaṅgraha, dedicated to Čannabasapa Basaliṅgappa, Deputy Educational Inspector, Dharwar S. D., 1874. (It is based on No. 1 or Gaṅgâdhara's work, and besides introduces a number of Saṁskṛita words which it explains in the South-Mahratta Kannaḍa, occasionally giving them questionable meanings.)

4. Canarese School-books, 1—4, Bombay, the Department of Public Instruction, printed at the Mangalore Basel Mission Press, 1882, 1883 and 1886. The school-book No. 5 was the first of the series, and printed in 1868 at a Mysore Press. (All of them are very useful for learning the South-Mahratta Kannaḍa.)

d) Kannaḍa Proverbs collected in the South-Mahratta country, Mysore and Canara. (Most of them are old and very instructive, some adopted from Tuḷu, and some of late origin.)

e) Colloquial words common to all Kannaḍa people; Mysore and South-Mahratta terms of ordinary conversation. (It has been impossible always to ascertain whether a Mysore word exists also in South-Mahratta.)

f) Dravida-English Dictionaries.

1. The Rev. W. Reeve's Carnâtaka and English Dictionary, Madras, 1832.
2. A Dictionary of the Tamil and English languages by the Rev. J. P. Rottler, D. Ph., Madras, 1834 seq. (based also on Fabricous's Tamil and English Dictionary).
3. A Dictionary of the Teloogoo Language by A. D. Campbell, C. S., Madras, 1821.
4. A Telugu-English Dictionary by C. P. Brown, C. S., Madras, 1852.
5. Tuḷu-English Dictionary by the Rev. A. Männer, B. M. Press, Mangalore, 1886.

g) Saṁskṛita Dictionaries.

1. Professors Böhtlingk and Roth's Wörterbuch.
2. Professor Monier Williams's Sanskṛit-English Dictionary, 1872.
3. H. T. Colebrooke Esq.'s Amarakôša, Serampore, 1825.
4. Professor Aufrecht's Halâyudha's Abhidhânaratnamâlâ, 1861.

h) Mahratti Dictionary.

A Compendium of Molesworth's Marathi and English Dictionary, by Baba Padmanji, Third Edition, Bombay, 1882.

III. Method of working used in compiling this Dictionary.

The Author's principle when preparing Kêširâja's Šabdamaṇidarpaṇa and Nâgavarma's Čhandas for the press had been not to employ any scribes, but to examine and write every word himself. This he followed also first of all in preparing, to his utmost ability, trustworthy MSS. of the Nâcirâcîya, Bomma's Čaturâsya-nighaṇṭu, Abhinava Maṅgarâja's Nighaṇṭu, Dêvôttama's Nânârtharatnâkara, Liṅga's Kabbigara Kaypiḍi, and Tôṭada Ârya's Šabdamaṇjari, by collating various rare ancient MSS., all of which show the distinction between the letters ṟ and r, which is a very essential one. The same distinction, it may be remarked here, is throughout made in the Mḍb. palmyra MS. of the Čandraprabha-purâṇa which was used, and mostly also in the Mḍb. paper MS. of Abhinava Pampa's Râmačandra-purâṇa (in which some irregularities in this respect occur, but only on account of the Mangalore copyist who was not aware of the great importance of that distinction till it was pointed out to him).

When in India the MSS. of the above-mentioned native vocabularies had been made ready for use, the Author began to write the Index for which he used a number of pure Kannaḍa words collected by himself, the said vocabularies, the Šabdamaṇidarpaṇa, the Čhandas, and Reeve's Carnâtaka-English Dictionary[1].

1) Mr. Reeve states in his Preface p. II: "The rareness of ancient manuscripts, the endless blunders of drivelling and hireling transcribers, the paucity of duplicates for collation, and the comparatively very small number of men to be found among the natives possessing appropriate philological information, soundness of judgment or zeal for literary research and general improvement, all are obstacles the Author has had to encounter in their full force, and which have occasioned no inconsiderable suspense, annoyance and embarrassment; and though, by drudgery and

Remarks on etymology and comparative philology, and references to various other works were adduced, and common colloquial words added. It is unnecessary to describe the further mode of operation and the final writing of the MS. for the press.

perseverance, he has surmounted them in some way or other, he cannot entertain the hope that he has done so, in every instance, with complete success. In a few cases, the existing doubt has been expressed by a mark of interrogation; in others, where discrepancies prevailed in the authorities consulted, the words have either been rescinded altogether or those meanings have been attached to them which the majorities of opinions favoured."

"The method adopted in collecting and arranging the materials of which the present work is composed has been briefly as follows. Two clever men were employed in culling from the Amarakôśa and other Sanscrit vocabularies such terms as are current among classical writers on science and mythology; two in writing on the margins of the Telugoo and Tamil Dictionaries corresponding Carnâtaca words; two in the collection, under appropriate heads, of radicals, synonyms, technicalities, peculiar phrases, proverbs etc. etc. etc. occurring in ancient and modern vocabularies and grammars, or marked down for the purpose in other books, during the progress of a long course of reading. The names of the articles of trade and commerce, and those of the implements of husbandry, the tools and apparatuses of mechanics and artists, and the fruits, flowers, grains, etc. etc. cultivated by gardeners and farmers, were obtained by securing, in succession, the attendance of a person, tolerably informed, from each of those trades or callings."

In p. I. he remarks: "The affinity between the Telugoo and Carnâtaka languages is so great that, frequently, it is only necessary to change an initial or an inflection to make the correspondence complete: therefore where the definitions in Campbell's Telugoo Dictionary appeared full and accurate, the Author has, in such cases, adopted them into his own work, with little or no alteration, as it appeared to him to savour less of utility than of pedantry to do otherwise." "In the Sanscrit department of the present work, the chief of what is valuable has been derived from Wilson's Sanscrit Dictionary, though it contains a very large collection of words, in this language, which have never before appeared in print: for these the Author holds himself solely responsible."

Mr. Reeve commenced his Dictionary "as far back as the year 1817".

The Author of the present Dictionary takes the liberty to state (see the words of Professor Monier Williams in the Preface to his Dictionary p. XXI. which he used regarding Professor H. H. Wilson's Sanscrit-English Dictionary) that he must own that he began to write his Index by looking to his predecessor's labours as a very great help to him; and let him here assert most emphatically, not only that, considering the condition of Kannaḍa scholarship when it was compiled, Mr. Reeve's work was a wonderful production, but that, like many others, he must be very thankful indeed for the valuable aid it afforded him in learning Kannaḍa. Nevertheless, sincerity obliges him to confess that as his work advanced, he discovered to his surprise that he was compelled to reject not little of what Mr. Reeve's work contains. His being the first Kannaḍa Dictionary, the obstacles complained of by him in his Preface, the vastness of the matter to be mastered, and the limited time usually granted to do so satisfactorily, will explain to any real scholars the cause of various defects. The Author of this Dictionary, profoundly conscious of the imperfection of his own labours, would not have touched upon this subject, if it did not, to some extent, account for the length of time (about fifteen years) it took him to complete his work. For, accepting Mr. Reeve as a safe guide, he took a considerable number of words (and significations) from him, inserted them in his own still unfinished Index, and believing the words to be quite genuine Kannaḍa endeavoured to establish them as such. After much loss of time he found that they partly were corruptions, partly true forms of Têlugu and Tamiḻ, and partly terms which he could not refer to any language he knew. Being at that time in Germany he was unable to learn whether the words were colloquially used in some part of the Kannaḍa country. After his return to India where he, at first in the Southern Mahratta country, commenced to work out his MS. for the press, he learned that scarcely any of the said terms were known there, but nevertheless inserted all of them, together with various etymological remarks that might possibly lead to the discovery of their origin, in his MS., waiting for the time when he could make inquiries about their use in Mysore. This remained impossible for him to do till he took up his abode at Mercara (in Coorg) where he employed a Brâhmaṇa, born in the north-eastern part of Mysore, as his Moonshi who, however, instead of enlightening him as to the questionable terms, furnished him with others, declaring them to occur in his country's colloquial dialect. Not before his having gone to Mangalore and the printing of his MS. having begun, the Author who had got there a helper in the person of an intelligent Brâhmaṇa Moonshi from the town of Mysore (who took a great interest in the Author's labours and was strongly desirous of their becoming correct), was enabled to form a judgment with regard to the terms (and the signification of others) by the Moonshi's emphatical declaration that he knew only a few of them. So, with the exception of these few and some true Têlugu and Tamiḻ ones, all the others with their appendages were expunged (an insignificant number of corrupt Têlugu and Tamiḻ words were retained to be

IV. Plan and arrangement.

The Compiler's endeavour has been, whenever possible, to adduce the meaning of words (Kannaḍa, Saṁskṛita or Tadbhava) as given by ancient and modern native writers. In their vocabularies, etc. they often put the word that is to express the meaning, in the locative, e.g. mukku khâdanavišêshê (Sk. locative) or khâdanavišêshadalli (K. locative), that is to say mukku is used in (the sense of) khâdanavišêsha. In such a case simply the crude form of that word appears in the Dictionary, as does also that of the two or more explanatory words in the locative occasionally used by the writers (see e.g. mâsu 1 and midi). In the explanation of a verb's meaning not unfrequently, besides a noun in the locative, a verb or two are given by the native authorities (as e.g. for kḷ 3, bĕdaku 2 and muḷgu), or a number of synonyms (as e.g. for bĕmar 1); they explain also a noun by synonyms (as e.g. bĕgaḍu 2 and misuni). All such explanatory words have been put in parenthesis by the Compiler.

Kannaḍa homonyms have been separated under two, three or more heads. This has been done not only when they clearly belonged to different roots, but also when there existed any doubt whatever as to their relationship (see e.g. aṭṭĕ 2 and 3, aḍĕ 9, 10 and 11).

When no etymology of a Kannaḍa noun or particle is given, its derivation is obvious, or either doubtful or unknown.

Ancient Kannaḍa forms of verbs or nouns with a final consonant are given apart from the modern with a final vowel, also with the intention of showing the difference of inflection.

All Kannaḍa formative suffixes have been brought forward.

Kannaḍa compound words have always been subordinated to leading words under which they are arranged in alphabetical order and in small type (to save space), a hyphen marking the division of the members of the compound. This method may at first occasion a little embarrassment to beginners, but all difficulty used for philological references), as were also nearly all those furnished by the Moonshi of Mercara (so far as they had not yet been printed). The MS. therefore was very much disfigured, became less perspicuous, and had to be partly re-written, so that much precious time was lost.

From what happened to the Author of this work through the Mercara Moonshi's incomprehensible blundering and from the obstacles of similar kind referred to by Mr. Reeve in his Preface it becomes evident that no blame whatever falls on the latter for the mentioned defects, and the great usefulness of his work remains intact. It would be a matter of futility and impossibility for a single person with limited time to go and search every hamlet for the perhaps possible verification of this or that term of little importance and at all events only local use; in such a case a Moonshi's word is to be relied upon, though an occasional error may happen. For words of the common and written language the Author himself, of course, is above all responsible. In places like Bangalore where nearly as much Têlugu and Tamiḷ is spoken as Kannaḍa, it is but natural that a colloquial Têlugu or Tamiḷ word should pass for Kannaḍa.

will soon disappear with practice. With regard to pure Saṁskṛita it was inadvisable to make this arrangement, but compounds of or with Tadbhavas and such in which the first member is another foreign word, are introduced in the same manner.

In order to bring Kannaḍa leading words prominently before the eye fat type has been used, whereas all Saṁskṛita, Tadbhava and other alien words are printed in small type. It is possible that a few of the words pointed out as Kannaḍa will, by closer examination, prove to be foreign.

As it is not only interesting, but also of great etymological value to be able to find out at a glance how many different forms one and the same word bears in Kannaḍa, all of them have been put after a sign of equality to one of their number. Because the MS. was not quite ready at the time when printing had to be commenced, unfortunately there occurred some inaccuracies on account of words that had to be struck out as being found to be incorrect (see above s. No. III.) and of others that were introduced afterwards especially under the letter h), and also on account of the difficulty in general connected with the matter wherein oversights are not but natural.

The meaning of most Kannaḍa words has been elucidated by instances from ancient, mediæval and modern writers and by references to their works as well as by proverbs, etc. As the first meaning of a word, that is given which seemed to express most clearly the idea of the root.

About the introduction of the proper employment of the vargîya letters see s. No. V.

For the benefit of Draviḍa comparative philology Kannaḍa roots, verbal themes and nouns have been compared with corresponding and apparently cognate ones in the four principal sister-dialects, Tĕlugu, Tamiḷ, Malayâḷa and Tuḷu. As the laws about the change of letters in those languages have not yet been fully expounded by scholars, a few mistakes may have crept into the comparisons. For the representation of Tĕlugu and Malayâḷa final short a that corresponds to Kannaḍa ĕ and Tamiḷ ĕi, the letter ĕ has been used. Comparisons are included in the parenthesis that is added to a leading word.

The meaning of a Saṁskṛita term which is printed in italics, is found either in the Amarakôša or in Halâyudha's Abhidhânaratnamâlâ, or in both of them. With regard to Saṁskṛita terms in general it is required to state that very freely and most thankfully use has been made of Professors Böhtlingk and Roth's Sanskṛit-Wörterbuch, Professor Monier Williams's Sanskṛit-English Dictionary, H. T. Colebrooke Esq.'s Amarakôša, and Professor Th. Aufrecht's Halâyudha's Abhidhânaratnamâlâ.

Whenever a term of Saṁskṛita Dictionaries is given without reference to a Kannaḍa work simply because it is found in Mr. Reeve's Dictionary, in order to point it out as a well-known Saṁskṛita term, a full stop has been put after it and then R. in parenthesis[1].

The Compiler's aim has been to raise his work, as far as possible, to the level of modern scholarship, avoiding the creation of such difficulties as cannot easily be overcome by intelligent beginners.

V. The Alphabet and system of Transliteration.

The Kannaḍa alphabet employed for this Dictionary, with the exception of two sibilants and two liquids, is the same as that which at present is generally received. As it is impossible to represent exactly the peculiar pronunciation of most of the letters by English ones, the attempt to do so has been abandoned. Instead of it the Dêvanâgarî alphabet (that possesses all the letters used in Kannaḍa, except the above-mentioned two liquids and the vowels ĕ and ŏ) has been given, its letters being pronounced like those of the Kannaḍa one, though a difference with regard to ṛ and ḷ was observed by the ancient Kannaḍa people, as they occasionally reproduced the sound of ṛ by ṛ̲ (see e. g. Tbh. kâṛa) and that of ḷ by ḷ̲ (see Šmd. 12 seq.) in their writings.

The system of transliteration by Roman letters (of which some bear a certain diacritical mark) followed in this work is that which has been used before in the edition of Nâgavarma's Čhandas of the Mangalore Basel Mission Press; it represents the two ancient liquids in the same manner as the Bombay Indian Antiquary does.

The Kannaḍa alphabet (its consonants appearing with the mark that shows their power when being pronounced without a vowel, and that corresponds to the virâma of Saṁskṛita) together with its transliteration and the Dêvanâgarî alphabet is as follows:

1) This method of indicating that a Saṁskṛita term of generally known meaning which is used in a Kannaḍa book of narration or fiction (e. g. the Čhandraprabha purâṇa, Dasava purâṇa, etc.) or in the Mysore country, is not the exclusive property of that book or country, was also observed wherever a reference to either or both of them was given (see e. g. akshîṇa, akshôbha, agamya, prajvalita, prapayipi, puṇṇavana, pôjana, etc.); but after the Author's return to Germany (March, 1892) the pressmen, not knowing the purport of the unusual full stop in the MS., left it out (from about p. 1279 onwards). This omission is of no great importance to Sanskrit scholars, and others will probably be but little concerned about it. It has, however, occasionally happened that where two or more meanings distinguished by numbers were given and at the end a reference in parenthesis was added after a full stop, this reference has, on account of the omission of the full stop, wrongly gone to the last meaning (as e. g. in vishnulliṅga).

The vowels ai (ĕi) and au are no proper diphthongs in Kannaḍa, but a convenient way of writing the letters ay (ĕy) and avu (or ava), and have been treated accordingly.

True Kannaḍa has no aspirated consonants, except in a few imitative sounds, although in later years through Brahmanical influence they have crept into writings and certain circles of society. In this Dictionary unaspirated ones have been substituted wherever the aspirated were not sanctioned by grammar.

As the letter š can never justifiably be used in any true Kannaḍa words or in Tadbhavas, s has been throughout put in its place in such words.

Of the two ancient sibilants of classical works ಀ or ಁ and ಂ or ಃ, only ಂ appears in the MSS. used for this Dictionary.

The letter ಌ of which the occurrence in the ancient literature has been fully established by the author of the Šabdamaṇidarpaṇa (and which is adduced also in Mr. L. Rice's edition of the Karṇâṭabhâshâbhûshaṇa sûtra 10 and in his edition of the Karṇâṭakašabdânušâsana sûtra 1), is not written in the MSS. (excepting those of the Šabdamaṇidarpaṇa) consulted for this work, but its original existence in them can (pretty certainly) be found out by the letters of alliteration employed at the beginning of each verse-line (see e.g. Cpr. 2, 14; 3, 39. 103; 4, 87; 5, 42; 7, 31. 118. 149. 150; 10, 26. 82) and by compounds (see e.g. s. ĕraḷ, and Cpr. 5, 42). As the ancient Kannaḍa people did, so also Saṁskṛita people occasionally transformed the letter l into r (as in karira which is a Tadbhava of Kannaḍa kaḷilŏ).

The ancient letter ೡ continued firmly to hold its place in Kannaḍa literature till at least the middle of the 18th century. If it does not appear in recent MSS. and prints of works of by-gone periods, its existence is clearly proved by the principal letters of alliteration (at the beginning of each verse-line) in which an r is never substituted for an ೡ[1]).

The introduction of the letters ಌ and ೡ into this Dictionary has been a matter of necessity; without them Kannaḍa and its grammar cannot be understood. If a word now written with the substitutional letters ಱ or r is not found in this work with either of them, it will be found a little further on with ಌ or ೡ. The slight difficulty to be surmounted on account of this will be amply rewarded by the increase of linguistic knowledge gained thereby. It is, of course, unadvisable and even futile to attempt to re-introduce the two letters into common Kannaḍa writings.

In Mr. Reeve's Carnâtaka and English Dictionary the bindu or sŏnnŏ has been indiscriminately used before classified (vargîya) and unclassified (avargîya)

1) This is still the case e. g. in Lakshmîša's Jaimini-bhârata; but the Kannaḍa Bhârata and Râmâyaṇa and works of similar subordinate classical value have abandoned the old rule. It is proper to observe that with regard to the employment of the letters ಱ and ೡ purposely no Mssnss have been consulted by the Author of the present Dictionary. The valuable Monthly Magazine Vrarirvarnini, appearing since April, 1892 (Sadvidya Mandiram Press, Mysore), has made an attempt to introduce the two letters.

letters. This method is unobjectionable as a convenient mode of writing, but when in a Dictionary the alphabetical order of words is infringed by it (as in Mr. Reeve's work), it becomes confusing and stands in opposition to the laws of etymology. In this Dictionary the letters ṇ, n and m, when followed by consonants of their own class, are always written in their true form, so that words in which they occur cannot but appear in their proper place; the nasals ñ and ṁ however have been replaced by the bindu, as their original form has fallen into disuse, and its printing is connected with difficulties; but their place in the alphabet has been strictly retained (see note under letter o 1 in the text).

VI. Dravida elements in Saṁskṛita Dictionaries.

That Kannaḍa has borrowed many words from Saṁskṛita either in their true form or as Tadbhavas is a well-known fact; and that Saṁskṛita Dictionaries contain a number of Draviḍa terms has to some extent been shown by Dr. H. Gundert in the Journal of the German Oriental Society (23rd volume, 1869), by Dr. R. Caldwell in his Comparative Grammar of the Dravidian Languages (2nd edition, 1875), and by the Author of this Dictionary in the Bombay Indian Antiquary (No. for August, 1872).

Dr. Gundert, in the mentioned Journal (p. 517, see Caldwell p. 462) says: "It might have been expected that a great many Dravidian words would have found their way into Sanskrit. How could the Aryans have spread themselves all over India without adopting a great deal from the aboriginal races they found therein, whom in the course of thousands of years they have subdued, partly by peaceful means, partly by force, and yet imperfectly after all up to this day?.... Where peoples speaking differing languages are in constant intercommunication with one another—when they trade or fight with one another, and have many joys and sorrows in common, they naturally borrow much from one another, without examination or consideration. And this must have happened to the greatest extent in the earliest times, when those nations still stood face to face in their primitive conditions. It might be anticipated, therefore, that as the Aryans penetrated further and further to the south, and became acquainted with new objects bearing Dravidian names, they would as a matter of course adopt the names of those things together with the things themselves." And Professor Th. Benfey, in his Complete Sanskrit Grammar (p. 73, see Caldwell p. 462) felt the necessity to remark with regard to the exotic elements in Saṁskṛita: "Words which were originally quite foreign to the Sanskrit have been included in its vocabulary."

Kumârila bhaṭṭa, who lived about 800 A. D., says in his Tantravârttika (see Dr. A. C. Burnell in the Bombay Indian Antiquary, No. for October, 1872): "It is now considered (as regards) words which are not known to the inhabitants of Âryâvarta, if they have a meaning known to the Mleccha, is that to be accepted or not?" He suggests (but only to reject the notion) that by application of affixes, etc. it may be possible to convert them into Saṁskṛita words, and gives the following examples: čôr, boiled rice (i. e. T. čôṟu), naḍêr, way (i. e. K., M. naḍĕ, T. naḍai), pâmp, snake (T. pâmbu, K. pâvu, etc.), âl, a person (D. âḷ), she (Tĕ.), and vair, belly (T. vayiṟu, K. basiṟu, etc.)[1]. What Kumârila suggested had been done somehow before and was done so afterwards; on the other hand there are twenty-one words, the so-called Tatsamas, which, as it seems, are acknowledged by Paṇḍitas to have been introduced into Saṁskṛita from Draviḍa without undergoing any alteration[2]. As a rule, however, the Âryas in adopting a Draviḍa word changed it considerably in order to suit it to their tongue, and whenever such a word was imperfectly understood or negligently reproduced, the change naturally became still greater. It is more than probable that Saṁskṛita borrowed a number of words also from Draviḍa tribes the dialects of which are unknown to us, so that in such a case it becomes very difficult and even impossible to trace their origin[3].

Dr. Caldwell in his Comparative Grammar (p. 453) makes the following appropriate remarks: "The grounds or conditions on which I think any word contained in Sanskrit lexicons may be concluded to be of Dravidian origin, are as follows: 1) when the word is an isolated one in Sanskrit, without a root and without derivatives, but is surrounded in the Dravidian languages with collateral,

1) Of these five Draviḍa terms vair is probably vĕṟu, the body, of Saṁskṛita Dictionaries.

2) They are the following: aṅka, aṅgaṇa, aṭṭa, kaṅkaṇa, kôṭṭi, gaṇḍa, galla, gôḷa, gôṇi, taḷa, tôraṇa, paṭṭa, bandi, bala, bila, maṇḍa, maṇi, malla, mâlâ, laṭṭa, sabaḷa. They are different from the so-called Samasaṁskṛita words.

3) Here follows a number of terms of the Bĕṭṭada kuṟubas in Coorg, some of which are peculiar: ikki, rice (=akki); čṟèi, undressed flesh (see s. čṟĕ 3); kula, an earthen pot (=kuḷa 2); kâvaḷĕ, darkness (=kâvaḷa); kittôḷi, an orange (=kittôḷĕ); kiri, a sheep (=kuṟi); kîy, a hand (=kĕy, etc.); kuṇḍi, downward (=kĕḷagĕ); kŏnĕ, top, point (=kŏnĕ 2); kĕbbu, sugar-cane (=kabbu); kĕrimbaḍa, a cumley (=kumbaḷa); kôṭa, coolness (=kôṭa 1); kyâṭa, kyâṭa, wind (=gâḷi, etc.); čama, a corpse (=śava); čĕḷi, coldness (=čaḷi 2); takki, jack (the tree); taḍu, taḍiu, a thunderbolt (=iḍi; Tu. teḍi; cf. Sk. taḍit); tâkur, hair; tirĕ, cloth (=stri); naṇḍu, a crab (see s. čaḍi, and observe that nâu I is =âu 1); niĕĕu, cooked rice (cf. nuĕĕu?); nêy, ghee (=nêy 2); nâligĕ, the tongue (=nâligĕ, etc.); pikki, a bird (=pakki); puḷḷi, firewood (=puḷḷi); pûja, a cock (=puja, etc.); pĕni (pĕṇi?), work (=T. paṇi); pôyya, slowly (cf. čyyanĕ); pôri, a male buffalo (cf. hôri); pŏṭṭu, a hen (=hĕṭṭi); pŏṇaka, a female (cf. pĕṇ, etc.); pŏrĕ, the moon (=pĕṇi); pôkĕ, a frog; bugulu, sunshine (=biselu, etc.); buṭṭu, a hill (=bĕṭṭu 2); bĕṭṭa, a stick (=baḍigĕ); maṇḍu, a bull (cf. maṇaka?); mutar, muser, a demon; mĕra, a tree (=mara 1); mĕri, a young (=mari 2); mênĕḷi, upward (=mêlakĕ); mĕ (in mĕkâyntr, pepper-fruit-water), pepper (=mĕḷasu, etc.); yânĕ, an elephant (=âne 2). The corresponding, cognate words in the Tuḷu language and in the Kŏrage language of the Tuḷu country (which as to its nouns appears to be nearly identical with Tuḷu, so far as the Author of this Dictionary has been able to learn) are as follows: ari, rice; kittaḷi, kittiḷi (Tu.), kittali (Kŏr.), an orange; kuri (Tu.), kŏri (Kŏr.), a sheep; kîy, a hand; kŏḍi, top, point; karmbu, sugar-cane; kumbŏḷi, a cumley; gâli, wind; śava (Tu.), a corpse (in Kŏr. puṇa, =K. pĕṇa, only is used, which appears in Tu. also); saḷi, coldness; iḍiḷi, a thunderbolt (in Kŏr. also čĕḍiḷi); tarĕ, hair; stri, cloth; ĕḍĕḷi, a crab; nĕĕĕi (Tu., nĕĕĕu Kŏr.), a kind of cooked rice (Kŏr. uses also avaru, aaru, i. e. K. ôgaru); nêyi, ghee; nâlayi, nâlâyi (Tu.), nâlayi, nâlay (Kŏr.), the tongue; pakki, a bird; pûjĕḷi, a cock; bôlĕ, work; pŏruḍĕ, a hen; pŏṇṇa, a female; mara, a tree; mari, a young (Tu.); mupĕi, pepper; âne, an elephant.

related, or derivative words; 2) when Sanskrit possesses other words expressing the same idea, whilst the Dravidian tongues have the one in question alone; 3) when the word is not found in any of the Indo-European tongues allied to Sanskrit, but is found in every Dravidian dialect, however rude; 4) when the derivation which the Sanskrit lexicographers have attributed to the word is evidently a fanciful one, whilst Dravidian lexicographers deduce it from some native Dravidian verbal theme of the same or similar signification, from which a variety of words are found to be derived; 5) when the signification of the word in the Dravidian languages is evidently radical and physiological, whilst the Sanskrit signification is metaphorical, or only collateral; 6) when native Dravidian scholars, notwithstanding their high estimation of Sanskrit, as the language of the gods and the mother of all literature, classify the word in question as a purely Dravidian one;—when any of these reasons is found to exist, and more especially when several or all of them coincide, I conceive we may safely conclude the word in question to be Dravidian, not a Sanskrit derivative." May it be added that at all events only such words of Saṁskṛita lexicons can be declared to be borrowed from Draviḍa, as will at once be recognised by a Saṁskṛita scholar as foreign or probably foreign constituents of the language. Although the age of a Saṁskṛita or Draviḍa term is to be considered before thinking it to be exotic, age alone cannot be decisive, as may be seen e. g. from the ancient Tadbhavas of Saṁskṛita in the mouth of all classes of Draviḍa society.

In the subjoined list of terms probably borrowed by Saṁskṛita from the Draviḍa tongues verbal themes are only so far included as they are necessary to elucidate the connection of some Saṁskṛita and Draviḍa words, as a careful examination of the Saṁskṛita dhâtupâṭhas compels one to think that Paṇḍitas systematically inserted many Draviḍa verbal themes or roots into them. To settle this a separate disquisition is required, and if satisfactorily done, will remove various doubts still connected with Indo-European philology. The present list is incomplete and partly only suggestive; its chief object is to encourage others to a more thorough research. About the changes of letters some material help will be afforded by consulting the text of this Dictionary[1]. Words noticed by Dr. Gundert (=Gt.)

1) The interchange of consonants in the Kannaḍa language itself as indicated by grammar and use has to some extent been shown in the Dictionary under the letters of the Alphabet and in other places of the text; the Tadbhavas in Śmd. 80 and 334 seq. are to be noticed especially; and besides the following remarks on the interchange of consonants in Kannaḍa and other dialects, imperfect as they are, may be acceptable:

1, g appears as v in T. tagĕi = tavĕ 2;—as m in Tu. bĕgar = bĕmar 3;—as y in Tĕ. baḍiyĕ s. baḍigĕ, in T. vâyal, vâyil = bâgil, and in Tĕ. mĕyilu = mugil;—as j (ś, s) in T. vâjal = bâgil;—and as s in aḷi 3 = giḷi. See also s. No. 7. — 2, j appears as y in Tu. âḷi = âḍu 4, Tu. kaṇḍi = kaḍu 1, Tu. tŏj = tŏḍ, Tu. baḍi = baḍi, and Tu. mûḍi = mûḍu —and as y in T. mayaṅgu = maḍaṅgu (s. maṅku). See also s. No. 1. — 3, ḍ appears as ḷ in T. and M. mŏḷḷ = mŏḍ 3. — 4, ṭ appears as ḷ in T. maṭṭu (s. maṭṭu 1) = maḷḷu, and in Tĕ. mâṭṭi = mâḷḷĕ;—as ṛ in hĕṛĕ = hĕṭṭa;—and as s in T., M. and Tĕ. vaṭṭi = basi 1, T. vaṭṭi = basi 2, and Tĕ. vaṭṭi = basi 3. — 5, ṗ appears as r in Tu. mŏṗŏ = mŏṛŏ.

and Dr. Caldwell (=Cl.) have been marked with an asterisk. D. stands for Draviḍa, and indicates the Kannaḍa word or words in question found in this Dictionary together with the word or words of cognate dialects given under it or them. In the text of the work, Tadbhavas that may be supposed to be originally Draviḍa words, have not been marked out as such. It would exceed the limits of the following discussion to try to systematize the rules Saṁskṛita may have used in adopting D. words.

Words probably borrowed by Saṁskṛita from Draviḍa:

a. Words relating to the body.

1. śraṭa, flesh. Cf. D. śrĕ s and the cognate terms adduced under it.
2. impa (in nilimpa, a god). Gt. (p. 529) thinks nilimpa comes perhaps from D. nil, standing, and imĕ, the eyelid (impa, one with eyelids): "one whose eyelids stand" or one whose eyes do not twinkle.
3. kakṣha, the armpit. See No. 240.
4. kaṇḍala, the cheek. Cf. D. kadapu, kadampu, kanna 2, kĕkkĕ, kĕnnĕ. To fix the original idea and root of the D. terms is difficult. Sk. karaṭa, karṭâ, an elephant's cheek; a cheek (Mr. 207), gaṇḍa, a cheek, and especially also the Tatsama galla, the cheek, may be compared.—kaṇḍala, gold, reminds one of kanaka, q. v. (Nos. 97. 180).—kaṇḍala, war, battle, appears to be connected with kadana, q. v. (No. 355).
5. kalana, kalala, kalâ, a small round lump, the embryo shortly after conception. Cf. D, kandu s. As the leading idea is doubtful, the root is likewise so. Sk. jala, the embryo or uterus of a cow (see s. D. janĕ), and perhaps also D. kadĕ may be compared.
6. kîlâla, blood. If this word is composed of kîla and âla, the first meaning might be "red water", kîla being formed of D. kĕn, etc., "redness", and âla being "water" (see s. D. âli 1, and cf. D. kĕnnîr). The Nn. (54) gives also the meaning of "redness" to kîlâla, and Mr. (47) that of "a blazing flame". The last one is that of Sk. kîla, kîlâ, fire, flame. kîla, the sun, belongs to the same D. root; cf. especially D. kisu 2, kêsu 2, (kiḍi 1);—kîḷâḷa, a sweet beverage, reminds one of D. siyâḷa (si, sweet, âḷa, water), the sweet water of the cocoa-nut.

See also Nos. 1 and 10. — 10, y appears as m in T. and M. viyar = bĕmar 1;—as s in T. vayiṛu and M. vayaṛu = basiṛ, in T. and M. vĕyil = bisil, and in T. pĕy = pusi 1;—as sh in M. mushiṅgu, mushuṅgu = muyiṅgu (s. muggu 4);—and as ḷ in Tĕ. gĕyyi = kuḷi 2, in M. mayal = maḷal (s. maḷal), M. mayi = maḷi (s. masi), and M. muyiṅgu = muḷuṅgu (s. muggu 4). See also Nos. 1, 2 and 7. — 11, ṛ. See Nos. 2, 3, 5, 6 and 7. — 12, s. See Nos. 1, 4, 6, 7, 10 and 14. — 13, ḷ appears as sh in M. mushuṅgu = muḷuṅgu (s. muggu 4);—and as s in T. and M. vaḷi = basi 1, T. viḷĕi = bisu 3, bĕsĕ 1, and maḷa 2 = masa 2. See also Nos. 3, 4, 7, 8 and 10. — 14, Regarding the change of initials in one and the same dialect mind also the Tu. words tuḍĕ, suḍĕ, huḍĕ (= pĕḷĕ, hĕḷĕ), a river; tû, sû, hû, to see; tâḍi, sâḍi, hâḍi, a road (= sneĕ 1, etc.).

7. kuñja, a tusk, a tooth. Cf. Tu. kûli, kûḷi, a tooth, and D. kôṛĕ (ṛ frequently becoming j).

8. kuñjara, hair. Cf. Tu. kujal, the hair of the head. See kuntala (No. 9).

9. kuntala, the hair of the head, hair. Cf. D. kûdal, etc., and Sk. kuñjara (No. 8). The first idea of the word is uncertain; could it have been taken from D. kuḷa 1 and guñju 2?

10. kurala, kurula, a curl. This is D. kuruḷ 1.

11. kê* (in kêyûra, a bracelet worn on the upper arm). Gt. (p. 520) thinks kê is D. kĕy 2, etc., kê-ûra literally "that can be put round the arm". For ûra cf. D. ûṛu 2, applying to, etc.

12. kharu, ghaṭa, a tooth. Both words are of doubtful origin. kharu may be the same as khara, if its meaning "harsh, cruel" is considered (cf. the cognate reduplications karkara, karkaśa), and may then be compared with D. kaḍu 1, etc., kal 4. Perhaps D. kaḍi 3 and 7 are connected, especially with ghaṭa. But could kharu be a misunderstood or corrupt form of D. halu, a tooth?—kharu, white, reminds one of karka, white; fire; a mirror; beauty, for which the so-called Tbh. kaḷĕ, shine, lustre, beauty, (kala, gold), and D. kaḷa 4, kaḷa 2, čalu 1, etc., čalli might be compared.

13. gaṇḍa, the cheek. See kandala (No. 4) and galla (No. 14).—gaṇḍa, gaṇḍu, a joint, a knot, appear to be borrowed from gaṇṭu, said to be the D. Tbh. of granthi (cf. also D. gaṭalu, gĕṭṭu 1).—gaṇḍa, (gaḍu), a boil; an excrescence of the neck, may represent the same Tbh.

14. galla, the cheek (Mlr. gâla). This word is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Mr. (207) has the form of "gallĕ". D. gallĕ means also "a lump, a clod" (cf. D. kadalĕ, gaḍaṇa); could the leading idea of (kandala, gaṇḍa and) galla be connected with "mass, thickness"? It is impossible to fix the first idea either of the Sk. or of the D. terms.

15. čuta, čuti, čŭtta, (guda), the anus. Cf. D. kuṇḍĕ and its cognate terms (Tu. also kûdi).

16. pakṣha,* the side of anything; a side, a flank (in T. written paḍja). Gt. (p. 528) compares pakka (that in K. at least is a so-called Tbh. of pakṣha) and D. pagu (see s. D. pagadi), pasu 3. Does he take "side, party, fraction", "half", as the first meanings? Pakṣha, proximity, might have been borrowed from D. pakkĕ 2, etc.; but a pakkĕ appears also as D. Tbh. of pakṣha, side. No comparison with D. is admissible, if pakṣhin, a bird (in T. written paḍji), is the German "Vogel", as has been supposed by Professor F. Bopp, a supposition accepted by Professors Th. Benfey and M. Williams. (The D. Tbh. of pakṣhin is pakki or, in the Kuṛuba dialect, pikki; Sk. phuka, a bird, appears to be nothing but another form of the D. Tbhs.).

17. para (in âḍampara, âḍambara, the eyelid). This is D. paṛĕ 4, the eyelid. The âḍam appears to be D. âḍu 2, moving, playing.

18. pâḷi, pâḷikâ, the tip of the ear; the ear (Nu. 31). Cf. D. pâḷĕ 3, etc., the lobe of the ear, the leading idea of which may have been taken from parĕ 1, etc. ("that is extended or broad").

19. puṭa, pûṭa, a buttock. Cf. D. pûṛa, etc. The original idea is "the hind part". The change of ṛ into ṭ is found in D.

20. pura, the skin. Cf. D. pŏrĕ 5, etc.

21. pôḍu, the bone forming the upper part of the skull. This is D. ôḍu 1 (the initial p to be explained by D. ô 5).
22. phâla, bhâla, the forehead. Cf. D. paṇṭ 1, etc. The first idea is uncertain. About the long vowel observe that Sk. hâlu is halu in D. (see No. 81).
23. maṇḍa, the head. Cf. D. maṇḍâ. The leading idea may have been taken from D. maḍu 1 ("that is joined to"), or from maṇi 1 ("that bends").
24. mukha,* the face. Gt. (p. 530) appears to be right in translating it by "the forepart", referring it to D. muk 2, etc.
25. mê* (in mêkhalâ, a waist-band, a girdle, etc.). Gt. (p. 529) takes it to be D. mây, etc., the body. If the comparison is right, khalâ may be D. kala 1, "that is joined or attached to"; (cf. Sk. kalita and the D. past participle of kali 2).
26. vasti, the lower belly, abdomen. Cf. D. basiṛ, etc. About the change of ṛ into t see No. 19.
27. vêra, the body. This appears to be the vair of Kumârila bhaṭṭa or T. vayiṟu (K. basiṛ, etc.; see s. No. 26).
28. šaya, the hand. Cf. D. kay 3, etc.
29. šiṁhâṇa, šiṅghâṇa, siṁhâṇa, siṅghaṇa, siṅghâṇa, the mucus of the nose. Cf. D. simbaḷa, sumbaḷa. The root of the words may perhaps be siḍi 3, or siṇ 1, or siṛumbuḷ.
30. šukti,* a curl on a horse's neck. Cl. (p. 461) compares T. šuṟṟu (i. e. D. suttu 2), anything round. Cf. D. suḷi 3.
31. hâlu, a tooth. This is D. halu 1, etc. Cf. Nos. 12. 22.

b. Words relating to animals.

32. âru, a crab. Cf. D. êḍi 1. D. initial â occasionally takes the form of ê, as in êḍu 3 (= êḍu), in êr 4 (= êru), and in êva (= â 3).
33. âla (in arâla, an elephant in rut, and in âlâna, the post to which an elephant is tied; the rope that ties him). This word appears to be D. âne 2, an elephant, q. v.; cf. Sk. êla (No. 36). The ara in arâla may be D. aḷ 4 or aḷi 2, destructiveness, so that arâla would mean "a destructive, vicious elephant". The âna in âlâna may be derived from an 2 or aḷ 1, and mean either "that is joined to" or "that holds".
34. êḍa,* a kind of sheep; êḍaka,* a kind of sheep, a ram, a wild goat; êlaka, a ram. Gt. (p. 519) is right in comparing D. êḍu 3 and translating the first two terms by "the playful", the root being êḍu 1. êlaka is but another form of êḍaka; cf. the so-called Tbh. êḷaga. Regarding the ê cf. No. 32.
35. êṇa, a kind of deer or antelope. This is a contracted form of D. êraḷâ, etc.
36. êla (in êlavâlu, the fragrant bark of Feronia elephantum). It doubtless is D. âne 2, an elephant; cf. âla (No. 33). Vâlu appears to be D. bêla, Feronia elephantum (see No. 116).—Aillâya (from êla), "that relates to the elephant", is according to the Dictionaries the same as êlavâlu.—Airâvaṇa, airâvata, Indra's elephant, is no doubt somehow to be derived from êla = D. âne 2.
37. kakuha, a buffalo. See No. 240.
38. kaṇabha, a kind of fly with a sting. Cf. D. kaḍaja, kaṇaja, a wasp, a hornet (of D. kaḍi 3).
39. karaṭa, a crow, and karaṭa, a frog, are derived from D. karē 1, and mean "a crier, crower or croaker".

40. kâka, kâga, a male crow, kâki, a female crow. Cf. D. kâgĕ, etc.; kâ s, kâvu s. As Saṁskṛita, in the Amarakôśa alone, has nine other names for the crow, it is certain that kâka, kâkî, and kâga have been borrowed from D. wherein kâgĕ and its dialectical forms are the only names for the crow, that is so very common also in the South of India.

41. kira, ĕmika, ĕiri, a parrot. Cf. D. giṇi 2, giḷi, the sound kil, and the verbs kiṟaĕu, kiḷir 1, kiṟu 1, ĕṟ.

42. kunta, a small animal, an insect. Cf. kunni 1, kuṟu, etc.

43. kurkuṭa, kukkuṭa, a cock, a wild cock; kukkuṭi, a hen. Cf. D. kuk, kural, kŏral, kûgu 1 and 2, and also Sk. kurkura (No. 44). There is the Sk. verbal theme kur, to sound, that has apparently been formed of the T. and M. verbs adduced s. kurkura. Kurkuṭa (contracted into kukkuṭa) is either a reduplication of a kuṭakuṭa, or more probably a composition of kur, sound, cry (i. e. T. kurai) and D. kuṭa, beater, utterer (cry-beater or -utterer, i. e. crier, crower). The present and only D. word for a cock, a fowl, is kôḷi, q. v., which bird is found wild in the southern jungles. kôḷi is of course a contraction of some ancient D. term, and kurkuṭa and kôḷi certainly are cognate.

44. kurkura,* a dog. Gt. (p. 519) makes it a reduplicated form, derived from M. kurĕ, T. kurai, to sound, to make a noise. See the so-called Sk. verbal theme kur s. kurkuṭa (No. 43).

45. kûṭa, a horn. Cf. D. kŏmbu 2, kôḍu s, kôḷ. The root is D. kuḍu, crookedness.—kûṭa,* an ox whose horns are broken. Gt. (p. 521) thinks that this word is the remnant of a D. negative verb; but there is no negative verb in D. (cf. D. a s). Let it be suggested that this kûṭa may rest on D. kûḷĕ (kûḷĕ) 2, or on D. kuṟu, etc.

46. kôka, kôkila,* the cuckoo. This bird is very common in South India. Gt. (p. 519) is right in deriving kôkila from D. kûgu 1. Cf. D. kava 2, kukil 1 and 2, kuvi 2, and the so-called Tbh. kôgilĕ.

47. gaḍi, a young steer; a lazy ox; gali, a strong but lazy bull. It is not impossible that the two terms are connected with D. kaḍasu 2, or kaḍi 1, or gaṭṭi, or gaṇḍa.

48. garuḍa,* the mythical eagle. Cl. (p. 478) compares T. kaḻugu, an eagle. Cf. also T. kaḻu, Tu. karu, an eagle; Tê. kaṅĕu, a sort of hawk.

49. gardabha,* khara, an ass. Cl. (p. 468) compares T. kaḻudai, an ass. See D. kaḻtĕ. The final bha of gardabha may have arisen from a D. sign of the nominative. The original idea of kaḻtĕ is uncertain. Gardabha appears in Mahratta as gâḍhava.

50. gôṇa, an ox; (khapura, a male buffalo). Cf. D. kôṇa, a male buffalo. Sk. gavala, the wild buffalo, if not derived from gava, gô, might be connected. Kôṇa is a contraction of some unknown form; its leading idea cannot be fixed.

51. gôdhâ, gôdhi, an iguana. That "lizard" was the first meaning might be guessed from gôdhikâ in gṛihagôdhikâ, the small house-lizard, and then D. gavuḷi (gavuḷî) might suggest itself for comparison. In Mhr. ghôrapaḍa is a word for the iguana.

52. ghuṇa, (kiṇa), a particular kind of insect found in timber. Cf. D. gŏṇṇĕ 1.

53. ghûka, an owl. Cf. D. guk, gû, gûgi, etc.

54. ghôṭa,* (Mhr. ghôḍâ), a horse. Its D. Tbh. is gôḷa or ghôḷa. Both Gt. (p. 520) and Cl. (ps. 470. 520) compare Tê. guṟṟa, a horse, and D. kudurĕ, etc., a horse, which they derive from T., M. kudi, to leap. See D. kuduku 1.

55. ĕiri, jhijji, jhiri, jhilli, jhirikâ, jhirukâ, a cricket. See D. giṟu 2, ĕiṟu 2, jiṟu.

56. jalikâ, jalukâ, jalûkâ, jalôkâ, jalaukas, jalaukâ, a leech. These terms, if Samskṛita, are unquestionably to be derived from jala, water, but give only a vague idea of the characteristics of the leech, an animal that abounds in South India. The Śabdamaṇidarpaṇa says that jiguḷi, jiguḷē are the D. Tbhs. of jalûkâ. It would have been apparently much better to say that jalûkâ, etc. were incorrect or fanciful forms of D. jiguḷi, etc., which are so easily and naturally derived from D. jigi 1, etc., glutinousness or slipperiness being the leading idea.

57. nakra, a crocodile, an alligator. This is D. nĕgaḷ, etc. The leading idea is not clear. For another nakra see No. 328.

58. pallava, the young of an elephant (Nn. 130). This appears to be the same as D. palla 1, ava (instead of a 2) being added to pal, a tooth.

59. palli, a small house-lizard. This is D. palli, halli 1. Palli has got its name probably from its well-known sounds; cf. D. padaṟu, parisu 2, paṟĕ 1, pala 2, and palumbu.

60. pâli, a louse. Cf. D. pên 2, etc. (â standing for ê; see No. 32).

61. piṅga, a young animal. Cf. D. piṟiju 2, piḷḷâ.

62. pillakâ, a female elephant. Cf. D. piḍi 4.

63. pilu, a worm, an insect. Cf. D. puḷu 1, etc.

64. puṇḍra, a worm. Cf. D. puḷa 1, etc.

65. pulaka, any kind of insect or vermin infesting animals. Cf. D. puḷa 1, etc.

66. pêḍaka, a louse. Cf. D. pên 2, pêṭkâ.

67. prû (in kaṭaprû, a worm). Cf. D. puḷu 1, etc.

68. balâka, balâkâ, a crane. This is a corrupt form of D. bĕḷḷakki (s. bĕḷ 1).

69. biḍâla, birâla, bilâla, viḍâla, virâla, vilâla, a cat. Cf. D. bâkku, bĕrku. The leading idea is doubtful.

70. marka, markaṭa,* an ape, monkey. Gt. (p. 519) thinks that markaṭa is D. mara, tree, and kaḍa, passing over, "tree-jumper"; but he has overlooked that marka too means "an ape". It appears to be certain that marka is the same as D. maṅka, the foolish or apish one; see maṅku. This word maṅku is connected with D. mara 2, etc., maruḷ 1, etc., and its original form may have been maraku or maruku, contractable into marku. Maṅga, monkey, (apparently another form of maṅka), is a word quite common in D.—markaṭa would be marku (i. e. maṅku), foolishness, and D. aṭa, playing, "that plays about foolishly".—marka, a demon or spirit presiding over various sicknesses of childhood, seems to be the above marka with a transitive meaning, "that confuses or bewilders"; cf. D. maruḷ, etc., a demon.

71. mâḍâla, a crocodile. Cf. D. masaḷĕ, mŏsaḷĕ, and see musalî (No. 74).

72. mina,* a fish. This is D. min, etc. Gt. (p. 529) derives mîn from D. miṉṉu 2, etc., to glitter. He is probably right, though mi 1 might also be thought of.

73. muktâ,* a pearl. Gt. (p. 529) arguing that the Tamiḷ fishermen had not waited for the Âryа tradesmen to give a name to the most precious object caught by them in their profession, believes that the Âryas adopted the now so-called D. Tbh. muttu (môti 1), a pearl, and attached an etymology to it that somehow suited their own ideas. He thinks muttu to mean "the first or best" (of gems), connecting it with D. muttu 4. D. muḷku, however, may be compared, and the meaning be "the immersed one"; but as the original idea cannot be fixed, one must be content with saying that muktâ appears to have been borrowed from D.

74. musali, the house-lizard. This word, no doubt, is connected with D. masaḷè, mŏsaḷè. The circumstances that the D. terms mean "alligator" (probably having been used by the Âryas in jest for the house-lizard), and Sk. mâṭṭâla, an alligator, appears to be but another form of D. masaḷè (see No. 71), go to indicate that musali is originally not Sk.

75. mêka, a goat. Cf. D. mêkè, mêṣa, byâ.

76. valguḷa, a flying fox. Cf. D. hâval, etc. The animal is a common pest in South India.

77. śalaka, a spider. Cf. D. sêḷadi, if Sk. jâlika is not connected.

78. śira, śina, śira, a large snake. This is the very common D. kârè.

79. sêdhâ, a porcupine. It is not impossible that this word has been formed of D. êdu 1, etc.

80. hâliṇi, a sort of large house-lizard. It appears to be connected with D. palli (see No. 59), which in Mhr. is called pâḷa.

81. huṇḍa, a tiger. This word strongly reminds one of D. puli, huli, a tiger. Puṇḍarîka, a tiger, may be compared. It is possible puli (huli) is connected with the idea of yellowish, beautiful colour, in which case cf. the terms s. D. pŏḷè; to these Sk. puṇḍa, puṇḍarîka and puṇḍra, are likely to be related.

82. hêramba,* a male buffalo. Gt. (p. 519) is right in deriving the term from D. êmmè, etc.

a. Words relating to plants.

83. arka, a plant with a white milky juice, Asclepias gigantea. D. êrkè, êkkè, etc. are its so-called Tbhs. The idea in Sk. may refer to its flower and denote "that has rays"; but the plant is common over the whole of South India and its name in the mouth of all people, so that it is improbable the name has been borrowed by D. As the leading idea is not evident, any attempt to find the root of the word must prove unsuccessful.—arka, copper. This term appears to be connected with D. êrè 1 and s. to be observed that Sk. has no short ĕ, and that D. ĕ may be substituted for a (cf. D. aḍè 15, an 1), so that êraṇḍa would have arisen from an ĕraḷu.

84. êraṇḍa, Ricinus communis. Cf. D. haraḷu (which may take the form of araḷu). It is

85. êlâ, cardamoms. This word cannot be Saṁskṛita, as the spots where cardamoms grow, belong to the true D. country, cardamoms were used by the Draviḍas before the arrival of the Âryas, and the word exists in D. without a synonym. In D. the word (êla, êlè, yâla) is always used with the addition of akki, rice, etc., as êlakki, yâlakki, and (in T.) âṭṭi, whence the Mhr. (and H.) forms of ilâchi, ilâyachi, êlachi, and êlâchi arose. The cardamom plant grows best in thick jungles where elephants roam about or used to do so, and it is not impossible that for this reason the Draviḍas called its fruit "the rice of the elephant". See âla and êla (Nos. 33 and 86).

86. kakuha, a dry wood, a forest of dead trees. Cf. D. kaṭṭè 2.

87. kaṇṭaka, a thorn; kaṇṭin, name of several thorny plants. The root of these terms appears to be D. kaḍi s, or perhaps kĕraṇṭu. Cf. the so-called Tbhs. kaṇṭa 1, kaṇṭi 1.

88. kanda, a bulbous root. Cf D. gaḍḍè 1, etc., gĕḍasu, gĕḍasu, and also kadè.

89. karira, karira, the shoot of a bamboo. These words are D. kaḷilā. Cf. the terms s. D. kāy 5.

90. kânana, kântâra, a wood, a forest. There is no proper root in Sk. to derive these words from. They may have been formed of D. kāḷ 1, etc.

91. kâshṭha, a piece of wood or timber, a stick; wood or timber in general; kâshṭhikâ, a small piece of wood. The so-called Tbhs. are kaḍḍi and kaṭṭigè. Kâshṭha appears to be D. kaḍita or kaḍata, that has been cut, of D. kaḍi 4. Cf. also D. kâṭu.

92. kuṭa, kuṭha, a tree. These are other forms of D. giḍa.

93. kuṭmala, kuḍmala, kudmala, a bud. These words appear to be composed of D. kūṭa 1 or kūḍu 2 and mala (i. e. D. malar 2, a flower), "a shut or undeveloped flower".

94. kâčuka. kâmuka, kaču, kačvi, a plant with an esculent root, Arum colocasia, etc. Cf. D. kēsu, etc.

95. guččha, guńja, gutsa, a bunch, a bundle, a bunch of flowers, a cluster of blossoms. Cf. D. kōttu 2, gutti, gudi 2, gōṅgal, gōṅgi, gōnā, gōlē 2, the so-called Tbhs. kuṅču, kōṅču, and the terms s. kudā.

96. guńjā, čiṅgi, the shrub Abrus precatorius; its berry forms the smallest of the jeweller's weights. The leading idea seems to be that of "smallness". See the so-called Tbhs. guńji, etc., and cf. D. kunni 2, guṇṭa, guṇṭu 2, guńju 1, čuṅču 2, kiṟu 1, kuṟu, ōṟu.

97. čampaka,* čampa, kanaka, a tree bearing a yellow fragrant flower, Michelia campaka; its flower. Gt. (p. 518) is right in deriving čampaka from D. čan 1, etc., redness, golden colour, as the flower at once suggests that derivation. This is corroborated by kanaka which comes from that D. root in its form of kaṉ, etc.

98. čiṅčā, the tamarind. Although the initial consonant of this word offers some difficulty, it appears to be another form of D. puṉisē which is formed of D. puḷi, sourness. Regarding the initial compare the D. tippali s. pippali, and mind that Tu. hudē (K. hōḷē), a river, appears also in the forms of tudē and sudē.

99. jhaṭi, a small tree. This is D. giḍa, etc.

100. tâmarasa, a red-coloured lotus. This term is evidently connected with tâmra, copper; a coppery red, which is to be derived from D. čan 1, etc. Cf. D. tâmarē, tâvarē.

101. tâla, (Mhr. tâḍa), tala, the palmyra. These words must have been borrowed from D. tāḷ 1. The leading idea is not clear.

102. nâraṅga,* the orange. Gt. (p. 519) derives it from D. naṟu, nāṟu, smell.—nâgara, nâgaraṅga, the orange. If these two terms are to be derived from the same D. words, the various changes the letter ṟ can undergo, are to be considered (e. g. ṟ=d, and d=g). Nâgara might then be nothing but D. nāṟal or nāṟalu, smelling; that smells, is full of fragrance.

103. panasa,* palasa,* phalasa, the jack. Cf. the so-called Tbhs. palasu, halasu. Gt. thinks the words are related to D. pala, much, many (p. 519) that is connected with parē 1 and 2. His leading idea is not easily perceivable. Does he think of the numerousness of fruits on a jack tree? May it be suggested that perhaps D. parē 1, a pointed tooth, is at the root of the terms, referring to the jack fruit as covered with nail-like points (cf. Sk. kaṇṭakaphala). In Tuḷu and Kōraga palasa appears as pēla.

104. palâṇḍu,* an onion. Gt. (p. 519) sees D. pala, much, many, in it. It seems preferable to think of D. parē 4, etc., the scale or coat of an onion. Aṇḍu may be D. aṇḍu 1, the meaning of palâṇḍu being "a going to or combination of coats". But the word might also be looked upon as a contraction of parê-paṇḍu, a coat-fruit (see Tê. s. paṇ 2).

105. pallava, a wood. Cf. D. paḷuva, etc.

106. pâli, ginger in its undried state (Nn. 81). Cf. D. alla 2 (initial p in pâli being a spiritus lenis, see D. a 16).

107. pippali,* long pepper. Gt. (p. 519) takes the word to be pippala and explains it by "great, excellent fruit", D. piri being "great". Upon this derivation not much dependence can be placed. A D. term of pippali is tippali (see No. 98). If this could be the original form, D. tin 2, irritation, might be thought of, in which case however the leading idea could scarcely have been 'taste' with which tin does not appear to be connected.

108. pilu, grass (Nn. 126; Mr. 489). This is D. pul, etc.

109. punnâga,* the tree Rotleria tinctoria, from the blossoms of which a yellowish dye is prepared. Gt. (p. 518) is right in deriving the word from D. pon, etc., gold. Cf. D. punnikê, ponnê, etc.

110. puṟpa, pushpa,* a flower; the menstrual flux. Gt. (p. 527) thinks the word comes from D. pû, to flower; Cl. (p. 474) doubts it, and prefers to derive that verb from Sk. phull, to flower, comparing Mhr. phûla, a flower (i. e. Sk. phulla). But phull does not exactly explain the form of puṟpa. Puṟpa appears to represent an original pulpa and to be somehow connected with D. pul, grass (probably "that is coloured"). This leads to D. pôlê, that is coloured: menstrual flux, the terms adduced under which sufficiently explain puṟpa. The D. words for "flower" are puvvu (i. e. pulvu?), etc.

111. phala,* a fruit, fruit. Gt. (p. 519) and Cl. (p. 484) suspect this word to come from T., M. paḻu, to grow old; to ripen (see s. D. paḻa 2), and to be identical with D. paṟa 2, etc., a ripe fruit. If, however, all the Indo-European words compared by scholars with Sk. root phal are really cognate, phala is not connected with D.

112. bîja, vîja, seed. This word has been formed of D. biḻtu, etc., of biḻ 1, biṟ 1. Cf. bindu (No. 160).

113. maríca, maríca, vêḷḷaja, black pepper. Gt. (p. 519) says that maríca is connected with Tê. miriya and T. miḷagu, black pepper. There cannot be the least doubt about it. See D. maḷasu, etc. Maríca and vêḷḷaja (not to be derived from a vêḷḷa) are identical with maríca. The leading idea is unknown.

114. malli, malliká, the Arabian jasmine. The jasmine is a wild-growing and generally cultivated plant in South India, and commonly known as malligê. It is so to say the flower, and its name appears to have been formed by contraction of D. maral 2, a flower.

115. mâ (in mâkanda, the mango tree). This is D. mâ 2.

116. mâlûra, Feronia elephantum. This appears to be a corrupt form of D. bêḷala, etc. The D. form bêla probably is the same as vâlu in âlavâlu (see No. 36).

117. mukula, a bud. Gt. (p. 530) is right in connecting it with D. mugi. The verb mugul is still more closely related. See the so-called Tbh. mugul.

118. mudgara, a bud. This may have been formed of D. musuku or musuṟu. Cf. also D. mõggê 1.

119. mûla,* a root. Gt. compares D. mŏdal (mudal), etc. (p. 529), of which it doubtless is a contracted form.

120. latâ, a plant of any kind; a creeping plant. It is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and probably formed according to the common Tê. rule which places an initial vowel that precedes a liquid, after this liquid and alters it according to convenience (see vrîhi No. 126, râtri No. 406, and rûpa No. 407). In the case of latâ, as will be seen, the vowel has not been changed, for the word appears to have arisen either of D. aḍar, to climb, to ascend (as creepers or flowers), or of alar, to spread, to open, to blossom, the nouns being either aḍartê or alartê, and following the Tê. rule, either ḍartê or lartê. The elision of the letter r that in this instance has taken place in latâ, is seen e.g. also in D. baḍuku 1 and 2. Regarding the interchange of letters ḍ and l also in D. cf. e.g. kadaḍu and kadalu.

121. varuka, a species of inferior grain. Cf. D. baragu.

122. vidula, a sort of reed or ratan; bidala, vidala, a split bamboo; a bamboo (in Mahîdhara's vaṁśavidâriṇî = bidalakârî). Cf. D. biduru, etc., a bamboo. It is probable that the meaning "ratan" of vidula has, in ancient times, originated in an accusable mistake or in generalization. Cf. vêtra (No. 124).

123. vêṇu, a bamboo. For this D. bidaru (Tê. vêdaru), a bamboo, is to be compared. Regarding the form observe that madana becomes mayana and mêṇa.

124. vêtra, a cane, the ratan. It is not improbable that this word was originally a Sk. Tbh. of Tê. vêdaru, T. vêdir, a bamboo, if the remark made s. vidula (No. 122) is considered. D. bêtta, a cane, though in common use, is a true Tbh. of Sk. vêtra.

125. vêra* (in śṛiṅgavêra, hṛîvêra) is unquestionably D. bêr, etc., a root. See Gt. p. 518.

126. vrîhi, rice. This term being without a perceivable root in Sk., is no doubt connected with D. akki (or arki, T. ari, ariji; M. ari; Tu. ari, akki) and Tê. vari. The syllable vri is, according to the Tê. rule given above s. latâ (No. 120), the same as Tê. vari, and the syllable hi has been formed of the K. and Tu. ki and the T. ji. In common T. the Sk. word vrîhi is written virigi; T. g often stands in place of h.

127. śimbi, simbi, a legume, a pod. These words appear to be connected with D. sippê, covering, shell, from root kir, q. v.

128. śuṇṭhi,* dry ginger. Gt. (p. 518) derives this term from D. suruḷ; cf. D. suruṇṭu. In T. dry ginger is called ŏukku, ŏuŏŏa, ŏuŏŏu, ŏuṇḍi, ŏŏṇḍi, ŏŏṇri; cf. D. surku 1 (=T. ŏuruṅgu).

129. hallaka, the red lotus. Cf. D. âbal, âval, âla 2, and see D. a 1a.

d. Words relating to metals.

130. kanaka, kandala, kala (Ct. I, 47), kâñcana, gold. There is the Sk. verbal theme kan, to shine (cf. D. kâṇ 1), for which, however, there are no authoritative references. The D. terms for gold are ĕini, ĕinna, ĕinni, which are related to ĕan 1, etc. Cf. D. kâñcu, kâñcu, kân, etc.

131. karśûra, karbura, karbûra, karvura, karvûra, gold. These terms remind one of D. kaḍavara, kasavara, gold, which, however, are now used only in poetry and are of doubtful origin; is Sk. kaḍâra, tawny, related? D. karbuna, (s. kar 1), the black metal, i.e. iron, which in form is nearly identical with the above Sk. words, can apparently only be adduced on account of the syllables bura, bûra, vura, vûra, (ŏûra), which probably are D. piṇa, puna, etc., metal. The syllable kar of the Sk. words may possibly be referred to D. ŏan 1, etc., ŏan 2, etc., kara 1, kaḷĕ (lustre), kaḷa 2.

132. kâṭha, kânṭa, a stone, a rock. With these terms kaṭhara, kaṭhina, kaṭhôra, hard, are connected, which refer to D. kaḍadu 6, kaḍu 1, etc., gaṭṭi, gaḍaŏu, gaḍusu. Cf. D. kaḍal 1, kaṇi 3, kal 4, etc., kâḍu 1.

133. tâmra, a coppery red colour; copper. In D. this word appears as tâmbra, ŏambu, ŏimbu, ŏŏmbu; it is called also kisuvŏu, the red metal (see s. kisu 2). The word is doubtless founded on D. ŏan 1, etc., kisu 2, etc.

134. piṇḍa, iron. This term may refer to D. piṇa, metal, if the meaning intended is not "lump, ingot".—piṇḍa, a lump; a heap, etc. appears to be connected with D. pĕṇĕ 1.

135. bhîru, bhîlu, silver. These words appear to be D. bĕḷḷi, from biḷi, bĕḷ 1. Could D. piñjari, silver, also be connected? (cf. No. 158).

6. Words relating to various natural objects, etc.

136. aṭavi,* a jungle. Cl. (p. 454) connects the term with D. aḍar, to be joined, to be crowded, etc. Cf. the so-called Thh. aḍavi, and D. aṭṭu 2, etc.

137. ari, the wind. Cf. D. ŏral 1, etc.

138. ulkâ, a fiery phenomenon in the sky; a meteor; a firebrand; fire. Cf. D. uḷku 3 and 4.

139. kaśîha, the bank of a river. See No. 241.

140. kajjala, a cloud; lampblack. The first meaning may be based on D. kad, etc. and jala, water; the second one is derived from D. kaḷgu, that is to say from its verbal noun kaḷgal, the state of being black (cf. also kâḍigĕ).

141. kadali, darkness (Nn. 45). Cf. D. kattalĕ, etc.

142. kuṭhâra, fire. This appears to be another form of D. sŏḍar (Tu. tuḍar, tuḍâr).

143. kuṇḍa,* a hole; a pit; a pool. Gt. (p. 521) is right in comparing this word with D. kuḷi 2. Cf. also Sk. kûpa, kûma.

144. kûla,* a pond. Cl. (p. 456) and Gt. (p. 521) refer the word to D. kŏḷa 2 (kuḷa), which may be right. They think kŏḷa or kuḷa comes from T., M. kuḷi, to bathe; this is wrong, as kŏḷa means "a hold, a reservoir" (of kŏḷ 1, etc.; cf. kuḷa 2, kuḷu). Kûla might also be referred to D. kuḷi 1 and 2; cf. Sk. ŏûḍâ, a small well, and ŏuṇṭi, etc. (No. 150).

145. kêdâra, a field. This is related to D. kĕy 4. It might even be disjoined as kĕyda (or kĕda, worked, tilled, fr. D. kĕy 2).—Tbh. âra 2 (or âḷa), and mean "tilled ground".

146. khadira, khidira, (ŏadira), the moon. These words are probably formed of D. kadir, etc., as are also ŏidira, fire; ŏudra, a ray of light (but cf. also C. ŏurĕu 2).

147. khaluḷ, darkness. This term may be connected with D. kaḷtalĕ, etc.

148. ghaṭṭa, a ghaut, is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and in D. generally pronounced as gaṭṭa; it is to be derived from D. kaḍadu 5.

149. guḍa, a moat, a ditch. Cf. D. kadaŋgu 2, etc.

150. ŏuṇṭi, ŏuṇḍhi, ŏuri, ŏûḍâ, ŏûtaka, a small well. The terms are related to Sk. kuṇḍa (No. 143), kûla (No. 144), and D. kuṇi 2, kuṇṭĕ 2, kuḷi 2, guṇi 1.

151. jaḍa, jala, cold, frigid, chilly; cold, frost, winter; water. Cf. D. ŏaḷi 2, taṇ, etc. For "water" D. jani might be thought of.—jaḍa, jala, senseless, stupid, apathetic, etc.

Cf. D. ǰaḷi 1. (Jaḍa and jala have been referred to the Indo-European languages by eminent scholars; the comparison with D. is only suggestive.)

152. taṭit, taḍit, taḷit, lightning. Cf. D. siḍil 2 (Tu. tōḍil, Kuṛuba tiḍlu).

153. tiṭha, fire. For this see s. D. ǰūpu, 1, and ti 1 and 2.

154. tira, shore, bank; margin, brink, edge. This is a pure D. word which comes from tir.

155. tôya, water. It is not impossible that D. tuy, etc. are connected with this word.

156. nala, smell, odour. This is D. naṛu, etc.

157. nira, water, has been borrowed from D. nîr. The original idea is uncertain; might D. nĕgaḷ 2 (nigaḷ, nigar) be thought of, so that the meaning would be "that shines or is bright"?

158. piñja, the moon. This word rests on D. pĕṛĕ, the letter ṛ having been changed into j (as e. g. in Tu. âji = K. âṛu, six).

159. puri, puṇḍra (Nn. 68), a river. Cf. D. pura, pŏnal, pŏḷĕ 1.

160. bindu, vindu, a drop. This has been derived from the Sk. verbal themes bid, bind, to split; to divide; bindu "that is split off or detached". If the themes are ancient, genuine Sk., the derivation appears to be right. But D. biḷtu, that falls or drops down, suggests itself for comparison (see No. 112).

161. bila, vila, a hole (as of a mouse, snake, wild beast, etc.), hollow, cavity; a gap, pit, chasm; an opening, aperture. The term is one of the 21 Tatsamas. In Sk. it appears also as billa, villa, which are the original forms, as bila or billa come either from D. biḍu 1 or from biri 1 (the verbal nouns being biḍal or biriyal, of which billa, not bila, arises first). Sk. verbal themes bil, bhil, vil, to split, break, divide are probably borrowed from the mentioned D. verbs and not equal to bhid.

162. bhûka, a cavity, hole, chasm. Cf. D. bŏkkĕ 2 (pŏṭṭarĕ, pŏr s, pŏḷal; it is not impossible that bhûka is another form of D. biḍuku of biḍu 1 which in Tu. appears as buḍu).—bhûka, the source of a stream, a spring, is D. buggĕ.

163. maru, a mountain, a rock. This appears to be connected with D. maraḍi, etc.

164. mala, a forest (Nn. 22), malaya,* N. of a mountain range; a garden; a celestial grove; mâla, a forest or wood near a village, are based on D. mala 4, etc., the root probably being malĕ 1. See Gt. p. 518.

165. maskari, the moon. This term may have been formed of D. masĕ 2, lustre, shine.

166. mudira, a cloud. This is D. mugil (d = g, as in M. vâdil, a door = K. bâgil).

167. vaiśâkha, the name of a month, April-May. It is conventionally derived from viśâkha, branchless; having spreading branches. Its D. Tbh. is said to be bêsagĕ. It seems as if vaiśâkha were a fanciful derivation from D. bêsagĕ, q. v.

168. śâda, mud. This is a formation of D. kĕsaṛu, under which cf. especially the T. and M. The change of letter ṛ into d is frequent in D. (see e. g. the Tu. s. D. maṛĕ 1 and 2).

169. śusha, śushi, a hole; śushira, a hole; a wind-instrument. These terms are probably connected with D. kuḷi 2, kŏḍĕ 2, kŏḷal, kŏḷavi.—śushira, fire, reminds one of D. sŏḍar (of suḍu; cf. No. 142).

f. Words relating to colour.

170. kar (in karṇâṭaka No. 182, karpaṭa No. 243) means "blackness". Cf. Sk. kajjala (No. 140), kambala (No. 242), and D. kar 1; see also No. 355.

171. kashâya, red; brown; the red colour. Cf. D. kisu 2, etc.

172. kâla,* kṛishṇa, black; a black colour. Gt. (p. 520) and Cl. (p. 501) derive kâla from D. kâḷ 3. Cf. D. kad, etc., kandu 6, kari 3, karĕ 7, kaṟĕ 1, kargu 2 and 3, karpu, kaḻgu, kâgu, kâḍigĕ, kâḍu 3, from which themes probably also kṛishṇa is derived.

173. ŏôksha,* beautiful, pleasing; pure, clean. Gt. (p. 527) refers this word to D. ŏôku. See D. ŏan 1, etc., and cf. No. 176.

174. nîla,* of a dark colour; dark-blue or black; darkness. Gt. (p. 522) gives nîla the meaning of "shade" and compares D. nĕḻal (niḻal).

175. phalgu, reddish, a red powder. Cf. the terms s. D. paḻapu.

176. ŏôṇa,* red, crimson. Gt. (p. 527) and Cl. (p. 471) consider this (like ŏôksha) to be derived from D. ŏan 1, etc. For the D. theme ŏan 1, etc. cf. also kanaka (No. 180), gaṟĕruka (No. 370), ŏampaka (No. 97), tâmra (No. 133).

g. Words relating to men, etc.

177. ari, a pious man. If this is not a corruption of arya, cf. D. aṟa 2. — ari, a master. If this is not a Tbh. of arya, cf. D. aṟĕ 1.

178. arka, a learned man. Cf. D. aṟi 1, aṟikĕ.

179. âḷi,* a woman's female friend. Cl. (p. 455) compares Tĕ. âlu, a woman, a wife (see s. D. âḍaṅgi). Perhaps D. âḍi, âḷi 1, in the sense of "a person with whom one plays, a playmate", might be thought of.

180. uruṇḍa,* name of a demon. Gt. (p. 518) thinks the word means "the round or rolling one". Cf. D. uruḷ 1, etc.

181. ôḍra, name of a people and country, Orissa. See the note s. ôḍra in the text of the Dictionary.

182. karṇâṭa, karṇâṭaka,* the Canarese country; a man of the Canarese country. The words are composed of D. kar 1, blackness, and nâṭa 1, q. v., etc., and mean "the black country" i. e. the country that chiefly consists of black soil, etc. See Gt. p. 518, and kannaḍa s. D. kan 2.

183. kali, a hero. Cf. D. kaḷi 4.

184. kalitga, a clever, cunning man. Cf. D. kal 1.

185. kiraka, a scribe. If the original meaning be "a scratcher, i. e. a man who writes on a palm-leaf with an iron style", cf. D. kiri 1, kĕri 1, gĕri; also kiṟu 3, etc.

186. kinâra, kinâśa, a vile man; a poor man. May it be allowed to suggest that these terms (as also kikaṭa, poor, needy) are possibly connected with D. kin, etc. Cf. also D. kina.

187. kuṭṭani, kuṭṭini, kuṭṭani, kûṭṭani, a bawd, a procuress. The original meaning probably is "she who brings together". Cf. D. kûṭa 1, kûḍu 1.

188. kubi,* kûbi, a man who is crooked-armed or has a curved or withered arm. Cl. (p. 456) compares D. kûn 1. Cf. kuḍu 3, etc. Sk. kubja, crooked, hump-backed; crookedness (Nn. 132) may also be compared, if the Indo-European references are not absolutely certain.

189. kumbha, the paramour of a harlot. Cf. D. kûr 3, kûrpu 2.

190. kôṅkaṇa,* name of a people (and their country) on the western shore of the Dekhan. Cf. D. kôṅkaṇa. Gt. (p. 518 and 521) connects it with D. kuḍudu, (kôḍagu and kôṅgu), kuḍi 3, kôṭṭu 1.

191. krûra, kûra (Mr. 469. 515), cruel, etc.; a cruel, fierce, ferocious, rough, man. The so-called Tbh. of these words is kṳ̂2, kûra may be the original form (as in kûra, krûra, boiled rice, No. 311), whereas in krûra a Tê. mode may appear that is seen also e.g. in Sk. kûrča, krûrča, the beard. Can Sk. kûra in its above meaning be traced in a true D. word? This may be found in D. kûr 1, of which the verb kuṭu, to sharpen, exists in Tu., which when used as a noun, exactly represents the so-called D. Tbh. kṳ̂2. D. kûḷa, a vulgar, rude, rustic man, may also be connected, if the first meaning be "a man of rough, unpolished manners".

192. khaṭṭana, khaḍûraka, kaṭṭêraka, dwarfish; a dwarf. If the short a of the initial syllable is not radical, but has arisen of a short ŏ, D. kiṭṭu 1, etc. may be compared; but there is also the possibility of referring the terms to kaṭuku 1, etc. Cf. Sk. kûshṭha (No. 91).

193. khaṭṭika, a butcher. This is D. kaṭaka, etc. (of kaḍi 4).

194. khala,* a wicked man, a scoundrel. Gt. (p. 522) is right in comparing D. kaḷa 7 (of kaḷ 2, etc.).

195. gaṇḍa, a hero. This is one of the 21 Tatsamas. See D. gaṇḍa, and cf. kaḍu 1, gaḍaḍu, gaṇḍasu, gaṇḍu.

196. čâmuṇḍâ, a form of Durgâ or Mârî, in D. also čavuṇḍi, čavuḍi. The word is composed of D. sâvu, death; a corpse, and uṇḍâ (uṇḍi, uḍi). Uṇḍi, etc. may be uṇi, uṇṇi 1, or ŏḍati (of uḷ, to possess), or uruṇḍi (she who rolls about; see uruṇḍa No. 180).

197. čundi, a procuress, a bawd. Cf. D. sŏndi.

198. nâṭa, nâṭaka* (in Karṇâṭaka), a Nâṭa or Kannaḍa man. This is derived from D. nâḍu, etc. See nâṭa 1, and Gt. p. 518.

199. paṅgu, lame, crippled; a lame man. This appears to be D. pĕḻava.

200. paṇḍita, a skilled, clever man. This word may come from D. paṇṇu 1 (T. also paṇ); paṇṇida (paṇta), one who is made ready or dexterous.

201. pišâči, pêshi, a she-demon. Cf. D. piṇa, pênâ, pêy, pêyi s. pê 1, pêtu, and hêdâ. For Sk. piyu, injurious as an Asura, and phi, anger, passion; a wicked man, too see D. pê 1. See also Cl.'s Appendix (p. 530 seq.).

202. putra,* a son. Gt. (p. 526) compares a K. root pudu, to be born. This root is nowhere found in D.; it occurs only in Mr. Reeve's Dictionary that was used by Dr. Gundert. Gt. further compares puytal (of T. puy, to become, to exist), a coming into existence, an existing, and T. pudalva, a son, and then D. puṭṭu 1. T. pudalva appears to be identical with K. pŏḍḷva (of pŏḍaḷ), which may become pŏḍarva, and means "one who comes forth or springs up". See Tê. pŏḍalu, to be born, s. puṭṭu 1. When Cl. (p. 486 and 506) compares T. paydal, etc., a boy (see s. D. pasuḷê, hay, etc.), with putra, he is decidedly wrong.

203. pulinda,* a man of a barbarous tribe. Gt. (p. 528) compares D. pŏḷêya (pulaya) s. pŏḷê. Cf. plava (No. 207).

204. pulôma,* name of a demon. For this term too Gt. (p. 528) compares D. pŏḷê, etc.

205. pulkasa,* the son of a Nishâda or of a Šûdra father and of a Kshatriyâ mother. Gt. (p. 528) refers also this term to D. pŏḷê, etc.

206. pôgaṇḍa, not full grown or adult: a boy; deficient in member, deformed. This word appears to be composed first of D. pô and gaṇḍa: having a deficiency of strength and manliness; and secondly of D. pô and Sk. gaṇḍa (see No. 18): having a deficiency of joints (or members). Cf. D. pôgaṇḍikŏ.—pôgaṇḍa, having a redundant member. This is to be explained by "having proceeded beyond the common number of joints (or members)".—But there is also the term apôgaṇḍa, a child; having a limb too few; having a limb too many. If this is not an inaccurate form of pôgaṇḍa (as probably avalaksha of valaksha; cf. Sk. arâla, râla; alaktaka, laktaka; avataṁsa, valaṁsa; avalagna, valagna; avasnasâ, vasnasâ; uruvûka, ruvûka), it would, according to the above derivation, literally mean "not having progressed in strength", "not having gone to or reached all the joints"; "not being without a joint that is in excess of the common ones".

207. plava, a Čâṇḍâla. This evidently is D. pôlĕya, pôlăyava, a Puliah. See pôlă, hôlă.

208. phalgu, weak, feeble, worthless, etc.; a weak person, etc. Cf. D. paḷa 2, paḷaga, or paṛĕ s.—phalgu, reddish, a red powder. See No. 175.—Cf. Gt.'s remark in p. 519.

209. bhilla,* name of a man of a wild mountain race. Gt. (p. 518) is right in comparing this word with D. billa s. bil 2.

210. malla, a wrestler. This is one of the 21 Tatsamas. It is to be derived either from D. maṛu 1, etc., or from malĕ 1 or s.

211. muni,* a sage, etc. Gt. (p. 529) translates it by "the first", or "one who strives forward", and compares D. mun 2.

212. vôraka, vôlaka, a scribe, a writer. This may have been formed of D. ôlĕ (vôlĕ), vâlă, or of barĕ 1.

213. śuṇḍâ, śŭlâ, a harlot. It is certain that these terms are identical with sûlĕ, a term that is most common in D. Cf. D. suall 2, etc.?

214. haḍḍika, haḍḍaka, haḍḍîka, haḍḍi, haḍḍipa, a sweeper. Cf. D. huḍugu 2, hôḍĕ 1 (used also in sweeping), perhaps also aḍaŏu 2. (ŏ may appear as a, see D. ŏ 1; a may appear as ha, see D. a 18).

h. Words relating to dwelling-places, etc.

215. aṅgaṇa, a yard, a court. This is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Other forms are aṅgaṇa (Sk.), aṅkaṇa (Čt. II). If the original meaning is "a place to walk in", cf. D. aṅ, the foot, and the so-called Tbh. kaṇa 2, or aṅgu (for Tĕ. aḍugu), the foot, and aṇa (i. e. aṇĕ s), the original meaning being either "foot-floor", or "foot-playing about".

216. âli, (and with the spiritus lenis) pâli, a raised bank, a dike, a dam. These terms appear to be D. êri. For the interchange of â and ê cf. No. 32.

217. êḍuka, êḍûka, êḍôka, êlûka, a wall enclosing bones. Cf. D. ĕlu, etc., a bone.

218. kaṭaka, a town, a village, a house, a dwelling. This word is derived from D. kaṭṭu 2. Cf. also D. kaṭṭaḍa, etc.

219. kaṭana, a roof, a thatch. Cf. D. kaṭṭaṇa and kaṭṭu s.

220. kâra, confinement; a prison. Cf. D. root kiṛ, and sĕṛĕ 2, and also Sk. ĕâra (No. 229).

221. kuṭa, a house; a fort; kuṭi,* a house, hut; kuḍi,* a small house, a hut; kûṭa, kûṭi, a house, dwelling; kôṭa, kôṭṭa, a shed, hut; a wall (see Dictionary s. gôḍĕ); a fort. Gt. (p. 520) and Cl. (p. 456 and 503) are right in deriving kuṭi, kuḍi from D. kûḍu 1 (cf. kûṭa 1) and comparing D. guḍalu, the so-called Tbh. guḍi 2, etc. The leading idea is either "a place of coming together" (Gt.), or "that has been joined together or constructed". Gt. attempts to derive kôṭa, kôṭṭa from D. kôḍu s, a point, and

Cl. (p. 457) from D. kuḍu 2; but this appears to be unnecessary. Regarding the short form of initial kû cf. also the terms s. D. kuppĕ 1 and guḍiyisu, etc., and Sk. kuṭuṅgaka, kuṭaṅgaka, a house, a hut; a roof, a thatch.—D. kôṭĕ (i. e. Sk. kôṭa, kôṭṭa) is one of the 21 Tatsamas.—Kôṭṭa, in the Köraga language, denotes "a hut of the Köragas".

222. kuṭaru, a tent. This, like kuṭa, etc. (No. 221), belongs to D. kûḍu 1. The forms of kuṭaru in D. are guḍâra, (guḍi 2), guṇḍâra, gûḍâra.

223. kuṭira, a hut, a cottage. This is D. guḍil, etc. of kûḍu 1. See s. kuṭa (No. 221), and cf. kuṭîra (No. 225).

224. kuṭika, a small house. This represents D. kôṭṭigĕ, etc. of kûḍu 1.

225. kuṭira, a small house, a hut (also kuṭira, kuṭâra); sexual intercourse (also kurira, kuṭṭâra); oneness, aloneness, exclusiveness (also kuṭṭâra). This word in its first meaning is equal to kuṭira (No. 223), q. v.; the second meaning points to D. kûṭa 1, as does also the third.

226. kuṭumba,* the collective members of a household, a family. This word has come from D. kûḍu 1, as suggested by Gt. (p. 520) and Cl. (p. 456).

227. kuḍupa, a clasp or fastening. This is to be derived from D. kûḍu 1, to connect.

228. kuḍya,* kûḍya, a wall. Gt. (p. 520) is right in referring kuḍya to D. kûḍu 1. Cf. also D. kûḷĕ 1 and gûḍu. The so-called Tbh. of kuḍya is gôḍĕ.

229. kâra, binding; a prison. This, like kârâ, is D. sĕṟĕ 2, of kiṟ.

230. nilaya,* a dwelling, an abode. Gt. (p. 529) compares D. nĕlĕ. Cf. also D. nilavu, etc. But if Sk. âlaya, etc. is considered, Gt.'s comparison becomes very doubtful.

231. pakkaṇa, the hut or abode of Šabaras. Cf. D. pakkĕ 1, etc.

232. paṭṭa, (paṭṭaṇa), paṭṭana, (paṭṇa), pattana, (a settlement), a town. These are to be derived from D. paḍu 2 (P. p. paṭṭu). See Cl. p. 458, and cf. haṭṭa, haṭṭi.

233. palli, a settlement, a small village; a hut, a house; a town. This word, like paṭṭa (No. 232), etc., comes from D. paḍu 2. Cf. D. paḷḷi (= paḍḷi) 1, etc.; paḍal 1.

234. mañčaka, mañčikâ, an elevated stand etc. These terms are D. mañčikĕ, derived from malagu 1 and 2 ("that is lain upon"). See the Tatsama mañča (No. 295).

235. mandira, a house; mandurâ, a stable; a mattress, a sleeping mat, a bed. These words are related to D. manĕ, mandi 2, mandu, mandĕ 1. Cl. (p. 507) derives D. manĕ from T., M. mannu, manu, to abide, to exist, that are equal to Tĕ. manu, to live, to exist (= jîviñču; cf. Tĕ. maniki, existence, living; home, abode; manupu, to cause to live, to nourish, to save = bratikiñču, pôshiñču, rakshiñču; mannĕ, existence, being = jîvana, bratuku). The above verbal themes are not found in their peculiar T., M. and Tĕ. forms in K. and Tu.; but as an initial m occasionally becomes v or b (as e. g. in the T. verb manai = vanai), it appears to be certain that they are the same as D. baḷ (vaḷ), to live, the change of letter ḷ being manifold (cf. Tĕ. vĕnakĕ = K. baḷika). Vedic Sk. mâna, a building, a house, comes from Sk. mâ, to form, make, construct; could analogously D. manĕ come from maḷ (Tu.) i. e. K. mâḷ, mâḍu 1, to construct, build?—Cf. vana (No. 236).

236. vana, a place of abode, a residence. This may be D. manĕ. See s. mandira (No. 235).

237. haṭṭa, haṭṭi, (a settlement), a market-place. Like paṭṭa (No. 232), etc., the terms come from D. paḍu 2. Cf. D. paṭṭi, haṭṭi.

238. huḍa, a bulwark, a bastion, a tower. This is D. hûḍĕ of pûḍu 1, hûḍu.

i. Words relating to clothes.

239. ambara, clothes, apparel. This word has no apparent root in Sk. The ancient, true and only words for "cloth" in D. are aṛa 2, aṛavē 2, etc.; the leading idea connected with them is quite uncertain, and a relationship of them and ambara cannot be established, although it may exist. Let it further be suggested that ambara might have been formed of D. amar (which with an inserted nasal might become ambar). This suggestion might be supported by the circumstance that ambara means also "neighbourhood" (i. e. the state of being adjoining?).

240. kakṣha, the hem of a garment tucked into the waist-band (also kaṭṭha). Its so-called Tbhs. are kaṭṭa, kaṭṭā. If the leading idea be "joining", cf. D. kaṭṭiṛi, kaṭṭu 4, and kaṭā. — kakṣha, a hiding place. Regarding this term cf. D. kariṭu, karē 4. — kakṣha, the armpit. Cf. D. kaṭkaḷ, etc., kavuṭkuḷ (of kavi 1?). — kakṣha, the side or flank. Cf. D. kaḍaya 2, etc. — kakṣha, a gate. This may be connected with D. kaḍa 1, or with kaḍē 3. — kakṣha, emulation, rivalry. Cf. D. kaḍaṅgu 1, etc. — kakṣha, a border, lace. Cf. D. karē 6, and Sk. kaṭṭha (No. 241). — kakṣha, a buffalo. Cf. D. kaḍasu 2. See also No. 86.

241. kaṭṭha, the hem of a garment tucked into the waist-band. See kakṣha (No. 240). — kaṭṭha, the bank of a river. Cf. D. karē 6, and Sk. kakṣha (No. 240).

242. kambaḷa,* a blanket, a cumley (very often of a black colour). Its Tbh. is said to be kambaḷi. Gt. (p. 520) is quite right in saying that kambaḷa is composed of D. kar 1, black, and paṭa, cloth (that may appear as paḷa in D.); cf. the Kuṛuba term kārimbaḍa (i. e. D. kari 3 and paḍa = paṭa), a cumley. Kambaḷi, no doubt, originally was karbaḷi (i. e. kar-paḷi), black cloth.

243. karpaṭa,* an old, dirty garment. Gt. (p. 520) is right in finding in this word D. kar 1, blackness, and paṭa, cloth. Cf. also D. kaṛē 1, a stain, a spot.

244. kavaṭa, kavasa, a coat of mail. Cf. D. kavaṭu 1, etc., kavi 1, the original meaning probably being "that is put on or covers".

245. ōṛi, the hem of a garment. This appears to have been derived from D. kiṛ. Cf. D. sēṛagu, and Sk. taṛi (No. 246), siṭi (No. 248).

246. taṛi, the end of a cloth; taṛi, the hem of a garment. Cf. D. kiṛ, and saṛagu, etc. See ōṛi (No. 245).

247. niṿi, the folds of a garment to be tucked into the waist-band in front. Cf. D. niṛi 2, etc.

248. siṭi, the border or skirt of a cloth (see Nr., Hlâ. and Mr. s. karē 6, who have siṭa). Cf. D. kiṛ, sēṛagu, and Sk. ōṛi (No. 245).

k. Words relating to utensils, etc.

249. aḍḍana, aḍḍaṇa, (that crosses), a shield. Cf. D. aḍḍa 1, etc.

250. aṇi,* âṇi,* a pin: the pin of the axle of a cart; the pin or bolt at the end of the pole of a carriage; a bound, boundary, limit. Cl. (p. 452) is right in comparing D. aṇi 1 and aṇē 3, the original idea being that of joining, fastening; âṇi in D. means "a nail". Cf. also D. aṇasu, âṇa 2, âḷi 1.

251. arara, a covering, a sheath. Cf. D. ōṛē 2. For the initial a (= ō) see s. D. ō 1, and observe that letter ṛ in later K. is often written as rr.

252. argaḍa, argala, argalâ, a bar, a wooden bolt to fasten a door. This occurs in D. as argaḷ, which appears to be composed of D. aḍa 6 and gaḍe 1 or gaḷa 2 or gaḷe, a cross-pole.

253. kaṅkaṇa. This is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Kaṅkaṇa, an ornament of the wrist; any ornament or trinket, may be a reduplication of D. kaṇa 3.—kaṅkaṇa, a string or ribbon tied round the wrist; a waist-tie (Nn. 45). Cf. D. kaṇi 2?

254. kaṭa, a frame of wood used for conveying a dead body (also khaṭṭi, khaṭṭikâ, khaḍu, khâṭa); a screen. Cf. D. kaṭṭu 3, and also Sk. khaṭṭâ (No. 274), etc.

255. kaṭaka, a string; a zone; a bracelet; a ring round an elephant's tusk; a mat. Cf. D. kaṭṭu 3, kaṭṭuka, and also Sk. khaṭṭâ (No. 274), etc.

256. kaṭṭâra, a weapon, a dagger. This word is to be referred to kaḍi 4. Cf. Sk. khaṭa (No. 273), and, with regard to the form, kuṭhâra (No. 261), kuddâra (No. 266); (kaṭâri, kaṭhâri).

257. kandu, an iron plate or pan for parching, frying or roasting. Cf. D. kari 1.

258. kuṭa,* kûṭa, a water-pot. Its so-called Tbh. is kôḍa. Gt. (p. 520) is right when he refers kuṭa to D. kûḍu 1, translating it by "receptacle".

259. kuṭapa,* kuḍava,* and Tbh. kuḍuba, a measure of grain. Gt. (p. 520) compares D. kûḍu 1, which appears to be unobjectionable. Cf. kuṭa (No. 258), etc.

260. kuṭṭanti, a kind of dagger. For the explanation of this word there is Sk. verb kuṭṭ, to cut, that has been taken from D. kuṭṭu 1, kuḍu 2.

261. kuṭhâra,* an axe; a sort of hoe or spade. Its so-called D. Tbh. is kôḍali. Cf. the D. verbs adduced under kuṭṭanti (No. 260). Gt. (p. 521) too refers the word to them.

262. kuḍikâ, an earthen or wooden water-pot used by ascetics. Cf. D. kuḍikĕ, and Sk. kuṭapa (No. 259), etc., kuṇḍaka, kuṇḍikâ, with which it is to be derived from D. kûḍu 1.

263. kuṇapa, a spear. Cf. D. kuḍupu, etc.? or kuṭuku 1, etc.?

264. kuṇḍa, a water-pot. This word, like kuṭa (No. 258), comes from D. kûḍu 1, which is corroborated by its meaning of "a lump" as of darbha grass (originally "a united mass").

265. kuṇḍala, a fetter, a tie. This is D. kûḍal in the sense of "that joins or connects".

266. kuddâla,* kuddâra, a kind of spade or hoe. Its so-called D. Tbh. is guddali. Gt. (p. 521) is right in comparing D. kuṭṭu 1, kuttu 2.

267. kûṭa 1, kuṭa, a hammer, a mallet (for breaking small stones). These terms are to be referred to D. kuṭṭu 1, kuḍu 2. Cf. D. kôḍati, and No. 361.

268. kûṭa 2, kûṭaka, kuṭaka, a ploughshare. These terms appear in D. as kuḍa 1, kuḷa 2, etc., from which Sk. kuśika, kuśi, a ploughshare, are to be derived, letter ḷ having taken the form of ś (in D. ḷ often = s, see e. g. maḷa 2). The leading idea cannot be fixed.

269. kûdi, a fetter for the feet. Cf. D. gudi 1 and 2.

270. kôṇa, a stick, a staff, a club; the quill or bow of a lute, a fiddle-stick, etc. Cf. D. kuḍupu, etc., kuṇil, kôl 1, etc.

271. kola, a raft, a float, a boat. Cf. D. kôl 3. In D. the word has been shortened into kal 3, kul and kŏl 2, from which Sk. kalâ, boat, has come. Is the leading idea that of "joining", and kûḍu 1 ultimately connected, so that guḍalu, etc. might be compared? See T. s. D. kŏlikĕ, D. kŏḷ 1 appears as kŏnu and kŏlu in Tĕ.

272. khaja, stirring, churning; a churning stick. Cf. D. kaḍa 4, etc., kaḍē 3, kaḷal 4.

273. khaṭa, an axe, a hatchet; a plough; a kind of blow or wound. This appears to belong to D. kaḍi 4 and 7. Cf. kaṭṭāra (No. 256).—khaṭa, a blind well. If the meaning be "that has been dug", cf. D. kaḍi 4. (D. karĕ 4 can scarcely be compared.)

274. khaṭṭā,* khaṭṭi, khaṭṭika, khaṭvā,* a kind of bandage; a cot. These words are connected with D. kaṭṭu 2 and 3. Cl. (p. 457) compares T., M. kaṭṭil, a cot. Cf. also Sk. kaṭa (No. 254), kaṭaka (No. 255).

275. khaḍga, a sword. Its so-called D. Tbhs. are kaḍuga, kaḷga (kaḷga), khaḷga (khaḷga). Instead of referring khaḍga to the questionable Sk. verb khaḍ (supposed to be = khaṇḍ), to divide, to break, it appears better to derive it from D. kaḍi 4. Sk. khaḍa, dividing, breaking, probably is the same as D. kaḍa 5, kaḍi 7. For Sk. khaḍgika, a butcher, cf. khaṭṭika (No 193).

276. khalina, the bit of a bridle. Cf. D. kaḍiyapa. etc. (of kaḍi 3), if the word has not been borrowed from the Greek, as scholars suppose.

277. gadā, a club. Its so-called D. Tbh. is gaḍā. The terms appear to be D. gaḍā, etc.

278. gāḷa, gāla, a hook, a fish-hook. This is one of the 21 Tatsamas. It is not found in Sk. Dictionaries. It appears to be connected with D. kaḍu 2.

279. guṇa, a string, a thread, a rope. It is impossible to derive this term satisfactorily from a Sk. root; if D. kuḷa 1 and kūḍu 1 are compared, the meaning of "a joining or uniting" (of strands) is easily obtained.

280. gēṇḍu, a ball. This appears to be D. ĕṇḍu, etc. (of sĕḍē 1 or sĕḍu).

281. gōṇi, a sack. It is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and is a contraction of gavasaṇi.

282. ĕuluka, ĕulaka, ĕaluka, a small vessel or pot; the palm of the hand hollowed to hold water. Cf. D. kuḍikā, kuḍitĕ, sōlagĕ.

283. ĕūḍā, a crest, a diadem, etc. Cf. D. sūḍu 1.

284. tarī, a club. Cf. D. taḷi, etc.

285. tarku,* a spindle. Cl. (p. 381) compares this with D. tiragu, etc.

286. talpa, a float, a raft. This is D. tĕppa 2, q. v.

287. tāḷa,* a cymbal. etc. Gt. (p. 520) derives this word fr. a D. root tal, to beat (sic!). Cf. D. taṭṭu 1, taḍā, taḷisu 1, tāku 1, tāṭu 1 and 2. Sk. verbs taṭ, taḍ, taṇḍ, to beat, to strike, are possibly derived from the above D. terms.

288. tōraṇa, a decorative festoon suspended across gate-ways, etc. It is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Cf. D. tōg.

289. para (in āḍampara, āḍambara, a drum used in battle). Cf. D. para, etc., a drum. The āḍam may be D. āḍu 2, sounding.

290. parigha, paligha, a pitcher, a water-jar. Cf. D. paravi, etc. The leading idea may have been taken from D. pari 1.

291. piṭa,* piṭaka,* pēṭa,* pēṭā, pēṭi, pēṭaka, pēṭāka, pēṭikā, a basket, a box. Gt. (p. 520) derives pēṭa from Tē. pĕṭṭu (i. e. T. pōḍu), to put, place, lay, and piṭa, piṭaka from D. piḍi 1, to hold. In Sk. the terms are derived from piṭ, to put together, to bring together, to accumulate (see s. puṭa No. 292). The so-called Tbhs. are pĕṭṭi, pĕṭṭigĕ, pĕṭṭiya, pĕḍagĕ, pĕligĕ, etc. If D. piḍi 1 be the root, it is to be taken for all the Sk. terms, Tē. pĕṭṭu being quite unnecessary. The Tē. terms, however, s. D. pĕṇĕ 1 might be compared.

292. puṭa, puṭaka, puṭi, a cup made of a leaf folded (and stitched); a basket or vessel or dish made of leaves. Its so-called D. Tbh. is pōḍa. It is somewhat difficult to determine from which root the words have arisen; but there is the Sk. verb puṭ with the meanings of "to unite, to connect, to bind together; to intertwine (saṁślēśaṇa, ślēsha)", and there are the D. verbs pūḍu 1, pūṇu 1, hūḍu, which mean "to unite, to connect, etc.", and also D. puri, piri, which mean "to twist, to twine (see s. puri 2 and cf. pōṣe 2). On these verbs puṭa, etc. rest. Sk. verbs puṇ, pūṇ, puḷ, pūḷ, used in the meanings of saṁhati and saṅghāta, piṭ in that of saṁhati, and huḍ, huṇḍ in those of saṅgha and saṅghāta, are evidently cognate. For all the above-mentioned Sk. verbs and their meanings there are no authoritative references, and they may be confidently declared to have been borrowed from the adduced D. verbs which are firmly rooted in the D. language. Puṭa, etc. are therefore ultimately connected either with D. pūḍu 1, etc. or with puri, etc.

293. pushpaka, a frying pan (Nn. 123). This is based on D. puri 1 and 2.

294. bâla, pâla (in karapâla, karabâla,* karavâla,* piṇḍipâla, piṇḍivâḷa, bhiṇḍivâla, bhindamâla, bhindipâla). Gt. (p. 520) is right in comparing D. bâḷ, a knife, a sword. Cf. D. basi 2 for bâḷ? Gt. thinks bâḷ (vâḷ) means "that is curved"; cf. the D. s. valaya (No. 299).

295. mañcha, a bedstead, a cot, a bed, etc. It is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and appears to be derived from D. (maḍagu), malagu 1, though a derivation from D. maḍu 1 is not excluded. Cf. mañčaka (No. 234).

296. maṇi,* a pearl, a bead, or other globular ornament. The word is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Gt. (p. 529) thinks it to be connected with D. maṇal, etc. He appears to be right.

297. masi, mashi, ink; soot, lampblack. It appears as a Tbh. in the text of the Dictionary; but on account of the T. and M. forms adduced under it and on account D. masi the word is probably D., in which it is deeply rooted. See e. g. masa 2, masaka 2, masuḷ, mañku, etc.

298. mudga, a lid. Cf. D. muṭṭe, etc., muttige.

299. valaya,* a ring, etc. For the formation of this term there are the Sk. verbs bal, to whirl round in a circle; val, to move round in a circle; val, vall, to be covered, surrounded or enclosed. The so-called D. Tbh. of valaya is baḷe. Gt. (p. 520) accepts a D. root vaḷ, to bend, to be bent; Cl. (p. 461) thinks that Sk. verb val has probably been derived from T. vaḷai (baḷai), to bend; to become crooked, to bow or bend; to environ, beset or surround. Cf. D. baḷasu 1, baḷidu, baḷku 2, (ōḷe 2). So far as Sk. root vṛi is possibly concerned with bal, val, a borrowing by Sk. from D. is excluded; but that concernment is not certain. Howsoever that may be, it is a fact that three verbs have been borrowed from D. for Sk. bal or val, bal meaning also "to live", and val 1, "to be attached to, to take pleasure in", and 2, "to increase". The first is D. baḷ, to live, the second D. ōḷ 1 or val, to be pleased, etc., and the third D. baḷe 1, to increase. In consideration of this fact it becomes very probable that Sk. themes bal, val, to move round in a circle, etc., have also been taken from D.

300. vijana, a fan, for the derivation of which Sk. exhibits the verbal theme vij, to fan. It is unnecessary to attempt to form this verb of Sk. vyaj, as vij appears to be the true D. verb bisu 1. Cf. D. bisaṇikĕ, bisaṇigĕ, a fan, from which bijjaṇa and bijjaṇigĕ, Tbhs. of vyajana, are to be distinguished.

301. šaṇa, an arrow. This is D. kaṇĕ 1, etc.

302. sabaḷa, a spear (not in Sk. Dictionaries). It is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Cf. Sk. šarvalâ, sarvalâ, an iron club or crow; Mhr. sabaḷa, sambaḷa, a crowbar. Could D. saḍĕ 1 be connected?

303. sûḍi, piercing, perforating; a needle. Its Tbh. is sûji, in Tuḷu dûji. There is no Samskṛita root to derive sûḍi from. It seems probable that the word rests on D. tûṛu 2, q. v., s occasionally appearing a t (see e. g. Tbh. sûṭĕ) and ṛ often as j. Regarding sûḍana see No. 418).

304. hôḍa, a raft, a boat. This is D. ôḍa (see D. ô 5).

l. Words relating to food.

305. aṭṭa, boiled rice, food. This is the relative past participle of D. aḍu 1, to boil, etc.

306. arka, boiled rice, food. This probably is D. aḍikĕ 2, aḍigĕ, aḷkĕ 2 (of aḍu 1), cooking; that has been cooked or boiled; food.

307. ôdana, boiled rice, food. There appears no root for this term in Sk., and therefore D. ôgura (Kôraga auru, avaru), boiled rice, food, may be compared. What are the terms to be derived from? If their initial has lost an original spiritus lenis (which is possible, cf. D. ô 5), it is evident that they are connected with D. puḷgi, q. v. Letter ḷ may become d and d appear as g.—ôdana, a cloud; ôḍma, flowing, flooding; wetting, moistening. Cf. D. ôḷku 1 and 2, with which also Sk. ôgha, a stream, and its Tbh. ôgu, may be compared; ôgha, a multitude, reminds one of D. ôḷgu 1 and 2.

308. kaḍara, curds. This word exactly represents D. kaḷaḷ 4 (ḷ=d) curds, which meaning also "buttermilk mixed with water" is the origin also of the Sk. terms kaṭura, kaṭvara, kaḍvara, kaḍara, and kaḍkara.

309. kalya, spirituous liquor. This is D. kaḷ 4, toddy.

310. kaḍipu, kaṇipu, food. This is identical with D. kaḍapu. Tu. kaḍipu means "curry" (=My. and T. kaṛi). Cf. D. kaḍi 3, to bite, to chew, to champ (=Tu. kaḍĕ, kaḍĕ).

311. kûra, krûra, kuru, boiled rice. This is D. kûḷ 1 (said to be a Tbh. of krûra). The ultimate root probably is D. kudi 1 (cf. kudakal, etc.), although the terms given s. D. kôḷĕ 1 might be thought of.

312. khaja, churning. See No. 272.

313. khaḍa, buttermilk boiled with acid vegetables and spices. This is to be compared with D. kaḍi 3 (and with kaḷi 3?).

314. khaḍiki, fried or parched grain. Cf. D. kari 1, kariku.

315. ôusta, tusta, busta, roast meat, fried meat. These are likely to have been formed of a suḍata or suḍita (of D. suḍu 1), "the having been roasted". Cf. D. kôṭṭasa, suṇṭagĕ.

316. pêru, causing to ferment. This term is perhaps connected with D. pĕṛ 2, etc.

317. phâla, phâlâ, phâli, remnants of food, refuse, orts. It is not impossible that these terms are taken from D. pâl 2. Cf. also D. pâsu 1 (of which a pâsalu, that is disgusting, may be formed), and pê 2. Also D. ŏńjal with an initial spiritus lenis might be thought of.

318. miyêdha,* food set before the gods. Gt. (p. 529) may be right in comparing the word with D. misal. Sk. scholars have compared Sk. mêdha.

319. mairêya, virâ, toddy. Cf. Tu. mira, mira, sweet toddy; Sk. mira, a drink, beverage. It is not clear from which root these terms are derived; but if it be allowed to think of a change of letter p into m or v (cf. e.g. pikka = vikka, piččhila = vijala, vijina), compare D. pîr.

320. hala, water; spirituous liquor, wine; halahala, halâhala (reduplicated forms), a sort of deadly poison; hâlahala, hâlahâla, hâlâhala, hâhala, hâhâla, spirituous liquor; a sort of deadly poison; hâlâ, spirituous liquor, the spirituous juice of the palm; hârahûra, spirituous liquor, wine; ali, spirituous liquor; âla, any discharge of venomous matter from poisonous animals. Cf. T., M. âl, âla, water (see s. D. âli 1); D. pâl 1, etc., that in Tu. appears as pêr, in T. as pâl and pir, and in M. as pâl and pirâ. The ultimate D. root appears to be pîr.

m. Words relating to numerals.

321. ari, six. Cf. D. aṛu 3.

322. âlu, a particular number. Could D. âḷu 2 be related?

323. mâlu,* a particular high number. Gt. (p. 529) compares D. mâl, etc. Compare also No. 341.

n. Words relating to diseases, etc.

324. irma, irma (Mr. 330. 396), a wound. Cf. D. îṛu 3 (of iṛi 1).

325. kaṇḍu, kaṇḍu, kharju, khasa, the itch. Cf. the so-called D. Tbh. kajji (the only D. word for the so very common itch), and D. kaḍi 3, karḍu 1 and 2.

326. kaṭa, a corpse. Cf. D. kaḍuku 2? (or is D. ŏaṭṭu 2 connected?).

327. kupapa, stinking, foul smelling; a stench, a foul smell; a dead body, corpse; a carcase. Cf. D. kôḷê 1 and 2.

328. nakra, a particular disease of the nose (nâsâjvara). Cf. D. nagaḍi, etc.

329. mura (in muragaṇḍa, muramaṇḍa, an eruption on the face). Cf. D. mûṛê?

330. vêla, sickness, disease. Cf. D. bêṇê.

331. šava,* šavas, a corpse (šavasâna, a cemetery, probably is the original form of šmasâna). The two words are of doubtful origin in Sk. Sk. verb šav means "to go", and "to alter, to change, to destroy" (vikâra). Could the second meaning rest on the D. roots tavu 1, tavê 1, savê 2? and can šava, šavas be derived from the Sk. verb? The second question, it seems, is to be decided in the negative. Gt. (p. 529) and Cl. (p. 461) think that šava is connected with D. sây, to die, sâvu, a corpse. Sây, to die, is say in Tu. Cf. No. 196.

332. hêra, demoniacal illusion. Cf. D. pê 1, pêtu; bêḷ 3.

o. Various nouns, etc.

333. aṁśa, aṁsa, a share, portion, part. Gt. (p. 523) compares K. haṅḍu 2. Cf. also D. aṅḍu 1, paṅḍu 1, pasu 3.

334. aṅka. This word is one of the 21 Tatsamas.—aṅka, a military sham fight; fight, war (Nn. 131). Cf. the terms s. D. aḍaḍu 2.—aṅka, proximity. Cf. D. aṇḍe 3 and 4, and the terms s. aṭṭu 2 and aḍagu 3.—aṅka, any mark or ornament, ornament, decoration. Cf. the D. terms s. aḍagu 3, and aṇi 2.

335. aṭa, roaming, wandering about. Cf. D. âṭa, etc. In the Sk. verbal theme aṭ, to roam, D. âḍu 1 is represented with a short vowel.

336. aṭṭa 1, high, lofty; an apartment on the roof; an upper loft in a house; etc. This is one of the 21 Tatsamas. Cf. D. (aṭṭu 2), aḍaka, aḍaku 1, etc., aḍar.

337. aṭṭa 2, dried, dry. Cf. D. aṭṭu 7 and 8, and aṛ 2.

338. ambhṛṇa, crying violently, roaring terribly. This probably is connected with D. arbâṭa (s. arbu) or ârbâṭa (s. ârbu).

339. ara, little. Cf. D. arĕ 7, etc. The original idea may be "that is cut or cut off"; see D. ari 1, arĕ 6. Cf. also Sk. ardha, arbha, alpa.

340. araṇi, the wood used for kindling fire by attrition. If the original meaning of this word be "that is ground or rubbed", cf. D. ari 3, etc., or ŏrĕ 3 (see D. ŏ 1).

341. arbuda, a swelling, tumour; a hundred millions. This word is perhaps related to D. ŏḷḷu, ŏrbu (short ŏ = a).

342. alati, a kind of song. Cf. D. âṇati, âḷati.

343. alam, aram, enough, sufficient (implying prohibition); fit; adequate, equal to; competent, able. Alam is said to be derived from Sk. verb al, to prevent (vâraṇa); to be competent or able (vyâpti); to adorn (bhûshâ); but the verb is without authoritative references. It would appear as if al, to prevent, were fancifully formed of D. ala 2, al, to be competent, rested on D. al 3 or âṛ 2, and al, to adorn (to make fit or ready), on D. al 3. Cf. also D. aṇa 2, aṇi 1.

344. alâta, a fire-brand. If the initial a of this word is another form of letter ŏ (see D. ŏ 1), cf. D. ŏḷḷĕ 5, and uḷku 3; alâta would then be identical with a D. ŏlata, "that shines or blazes".

345. alika, falsehood, untruth. Cf. D. âḷi 1, (or aḷi 3).

346. alé, alélé, words in the dialect of the Pišâčas, introduced in plays, etc. Cf. D. alĕ 3, etc., and Sk. halé (No. 417).

347. âm, an interjection of assent. Cf. D. âgum, âm (T.) and akkum, ahudu (K.), yes.

348. âli, useless, idle, unmeaning. Cf. D. âḷi 2 (or aḷi 2).

349. kaṭa 1, much, excessive; excess, superabundance. Cf. D. kaḍu 1, etc.

350. kaṭa 2 (in kaṭâkaha, a side-look). This is D. kaṭa 1, etc., a side. Cf. also Sk. kaṭaka, the side of a hill.

351. kaṭu, sharp, pungent, fierce, etc. Cl. (p. 455) does not doubt that the origin of this word is D. He compares kaḍi 3, kaḍugu 1. Cf. also kaḍu 1, etc., kay 2, etc., kasar, kâṭa 3, etc. Sk. khara, (kharu), sharp, pungent, acid, etc, are probably also related to these D. terms.

352. kaṭhina, hard, stiff; violent, cruel. See the remarks made with regard to kâṭha (No. 182), and cf. D. kaṭ 1, etc., and kaḍugu 2.

353. kadana, kandala, war, fight, battle. The root of these words appears to lie in D. kadā, kalasu, kali 2 (cf. kala 1), kalē 2, to join (v. i.), and the leading idea to be that of a "mêlée", which is seen also in Sk. kalaha, kali, khala, war, battle. It is, however, not excluded to think of D. tadā, sadē 1, to beat, etc. Cf. also D. kâdu 1. It is proper to adduce here some Sk. verbal themes from which kadana and kandala can be derived, which, however, are not true Sk., but borrowed from the above-mentioned and other D. verbs, viz. kad, to be confused or agitated (see D. kadaḍu 1, etc., kalaku 1, kaḷa 1);—kad, to hurt, to kill;—kal, to join, to attach;—khal, to join, to collect. Cf. also Sk. kalâpa, a collection, multitude; kalita, attached, affixed; kalila, joined, mixed; a heap; confusion.

354. kadamba, a mass, a multitude. Cf. the D. and Sk. terms s. kadana (No. 353), and D. kadalā.

355. kalaṅka, kalana, blackness (Nn. 86; cf. No. 170); a spot, a stain. Cf. D. kaṟē 1, kallē 1, and also kalaṅku, kalaḍu, etc., kalgu.

356. kalandikâ, kalindikâ, knowledge, intelligence, wisdom in general, science. Cf. D. kal 1, etc.

357. kalâ, any practical art, any mechanical or fine art; skill, ingenuity. Cl. (p. 455) derives this term from D. kal 1; he may be right.—kalâ, rejection, abandoning (Nn. 150). Cf. D. kaḷē 2, kaḷi 2.

358. kaluṣha, kalka, kalmasha, turbidness, foulness; dirt, filth; a stain. Cf. D. kadaḍu 1 and 2, kalaku 1 and 2, kalaḍu, kalumbu 1 and 2.—kalmasha, darkness, kalmâsha, black, remind one of D. karē 1, etc.; see also kalaṅka (No. 355).

359. kâshṭha, thinness, poorness (Nn. 33). This is probably a kaḷalta, the state of being thin, etc. (of D. kaḷal 1).

360. kuṭil, a curvature, a curve. Cf. D. kuḍu 3, guḍi 1, etc., kurgu 1, etc., and Sk. kuṭila, crooked, kuṇḍala, a ring; the coil of a rope. Sk. verb kuṭ, to be or become crooked or curved, appears to have been formed of the D. terms.

361. kuṭṭa, kuṭṭaka, making small, pounding. Cf. D. kuṭa, kuṭaka 1, etc.; kuttu 2, etc. Sk. verbal themes kuṭ, kuṭṭ, to break to pieces, to grind, to pound, are D. kuṭṭu 1. Cf. Sk. kûṭa 1 (No. 267), kuṭa (No. 267).

362. kûṭa, a heap, etc. This is D. kûṭa 1. Cf. Gt. p. 521.

363. kêtana, business. Cf. D. kêyta (of kêy 2).—kêtana, kêta, a house. These words too probably belong to D. kêy 2, meaning "a make or structure".

364. kêtu, bright appearance, brightness; a ray of light. Cf. D. kêṟu, kiḍi 1, kêsu 2, ti 2, and see s. ôṭpu 1.

365. kêyûra, a kind of coitus. Cf. D. kê?

366. kôṭi,* the end or top of anything; the highest point. Gt. (p. 522) connects this term with D. kuḍi 3, kôḍu 3. Cf. also D. kŏṭṭu 1, guḍi 2.

367. kôṇa,* a corner, an angle; the sharp edge of a sword. Gt. (p. 522) compares D. kuḍi 3, kôḍu 3. Cf. especially D. kŏṇe 2.

368. khaṭakikâ, khaḍakikâ, a side door; a private or back door, a small or venetian door or window. These curious words are probably identical with Tbhs. kiṭaki, etc. (=Mhr., H. khiḍakī); if not, D. kaṭa 1, kaḍa 3, side, and kada 1, a door, might, though very diffidently, be compared.

369. kharma, virility, strength. Cf. D. kaḍumâ.

370. gavêruka, gavêdhuka, red chalk. This appears to be connected with D. kâvi, jâju, jâdu, that rest on ĕan 1, etc. Cf. kâvêri (i. e. kâvi-êri, red bank), the river Kâvêri, turmeric.—kâvêra, saffron, is probably also connected with D. kâvi.

371. guḍa, a ball, a globe. This word appears to be cognate to D. guṇḍu 1 and 2. Cf. Sk. gula, guli; guḍikâ, gulikâ, and also D. guḍi 1, etc.

372. ĕra, a stroke, line, stripe. Cf. D. gîṟu 1 and 2, etc.

373. ĕrpa (in ĕrṇakuntala, curly hair). Cf. D. suruṭu, surul, suruḷi, suḷi 1 and 3.

374. jhilli, light, lustre, sunshine; jhillikâ, sunshine; jhallikâ, light, splendour, lustre. Cf. D. ĕalli; jalakkanĕ; kiḷi 1; siḷi 2.

375. tala, the under or lower part, the base, the bottom. This word is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and is based on D. talgu, tâḷi 4. Cf. Gt. p. 522.

376. tirita, finished, completed. This comes from D. tir.

377. naḍaha, lovely, beautiful. Cf. D. nĕṭṭagĕ, etc.

378. narma, sport, play, delight, happiness. Cf. D. nala 2, etc. (of nali 1).

379. paṭṭa, a tablet, etc. It is one of the 21 Tatsamas. In Sk. it has been considered to be a Tbh. of pattra. If "holding" be concerned, cf. D. paṭṭu 1 and 2; if "extension", cf. D. paraḍu 2, parĕ 1; if "adorning", cf. D. paṛi 3.

380. pari 1, embellishment. Cf. D. paṛi 6.

381. pari 2, blame. Cf. D. paḷi 2.

382. pâli, a part, portion (Nn. 31). Cf. D. pâl 2, etc.

383. puṇya, (pûṇya, huṇya, hûṇya), good, right, just, beautiful, etc. Could the original meaning be "that is to be assented to" (of D. pûṇ 2)?—puṇya, a habitation (Nn. 68). This has been formed of D. pûṇ 1, to put together; to construct (see the remarks to puṭa, No. 292).

384. punar,* further; again; back, in return; etc. Gt. (p. 526) is inclined to connect this word with D. pin, etc.

385. pulaka 1, pula, bristling of the hairs. Cf. D. pŏm 2.

386. pulaka 2, yellow orpiment. Cf. D. pŏlĕ.—pulaka, a flaw or defect in a gem. Cf. D. pŏlĕ.

387. pusta, smearing, anointing, plastering; writing, writ; a manuscript, a book. This term is based on D. pûsu 1 (pûsita, that is smeared, etc.).

388. pustaka, a manuscript, a book. Gt. (p. 528) is right in comparing D. pûsu 1. See pusta (No. 387).

389. pûjâ, worship, adoration, etc. Gt. (p. 528) thinks it probable that this word has come from D. pûsu 1, originally meaning "anointing with oil". Sk. verb pûj, to worship, etc. would then be the same as D. pûsu 1.

390. pûla, a pack, a bundle. For the derivation of this word there are the Sk. verbs pûṇ, pûl, to collect, gather, heap up, accumulate, but these are nothing but D. pûḍu 1, pûṇu 1, etc. (see the remarks to puṭa, No. 292). Gt. (p. 528) thinks that pûla is to be referred to D. root pŏl, accumulation (sic! he probably means T., M. pŏli, adduced s. D. pŏm 2); but this, though perhaps possible, appears to be improbable (see pôṭa, No. 392 and pôla No. 393).

391. pêja (in tilapêja, sesamum yielding a seed which gives no oil) is D. pê 1 (pêy) that expresses also the growing wild or worthlessness of plants. Cf. the idea of D. huccŏḷḷu (s. Tbh. huccu).

392. pôṭa, putting together, uniting. For the formation of this word there is the Sk. verb puṭ which however is of D. origin (see the remarks to puṭa, No. 292), and in this case apparently unconnected, for pôṭa appears in D. as pôṭi that, as D. pŏraḷi and pôḍu 1, rests on the D. terms given s. puruḍisu, pŏm 2, and on pŏrĕ 2; cf. Sk. pôla (No. 393).—pôṭa, pôṭa, the foundation of a house; the site of a house or dwelling, are connected with the same D. terms.

393. pôla, magnitude, bulk; a heap, quantity. This is best compared with D. pŏraḷi (contracted into pôli) formed of pŏrĕ 2, compared with the terms adduced s. puruḍisu and pŏm 2. There is the Sk. verb pul, to be heaped or piled up; to be great or large; to be lofty or high, and the Sk. adjective pula, extended, wide, vast, great, extensive. Verb pul has been given already in connection with puṭa (No. 292), and probably is not the origin of pôla; if however it were, it, with pula, would have been borrowed from T., M. pŏli and Tĕ. pŏrĕ s. D. pŏm 2. The terms s. D. puggu may also be compared.

394. pâ, hunger; pâta, hungry. These terms are based on D. pasi 1 and 2.

395. phi, phu, useless or idle talk. These words appear to be onomatopoetic, and remind one of D. pipi, puyyal 2 and puyyalĕu.

396. phê (in phêrava, a râkshasa, a goblin, a demon; a rogue; a jackal) appears to be D. pê 1. See also piśâći (No. 201).

397. bandi (vandi), a captive, etc. It is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and therefore is to be derived from D. bal 1, bali 1 (and not from Sk. bandh).

398. bala, power, strength, vigour. This word is one of the 21 Tatsamas, and rests on D. bal 1, etc.

399. bali, a gift. To form this word Sk. verbs bal, bhal, bhall, to give, seem to have been invented; bali is D. bali 2.

400. maṇi (in maṇibandha, the wrist, generally explained as "the place on which jewels are fastened"). It is not impossible that the current explanation of maṇibandha is wrong, the maṇi being perhaps D. maṇi 2, bending, so that the meaning would be "the bending-structure". Cf. D. maṇikaṭṭu. Let it be added that maṇi, by itself, has also the meaning of "the wrist".

401. mala (in malamâsa, an intercalary month) appears to be D. mala 2.

402. masina, pounded, well ground, finely pounded. Cf. D. masĕ 1 and 2.

403. mâyâ (of the later language), illusion, phantom, deception, deceit, etc. The word in these and similar meanings may be somewhat connected with D. Cf. e.g. D. maggu 1, maiku, maŏŏu 2, maṭa 1, maṭṭa 4, mabbu, malgu, mâṭa, mây, and Tbh. mâya.

404. mâra, hindrance, opposition. Cf. D. mâṛu 2.

405. mâlâ, a garland, a chaplet; a string; a necklace; a row, a line. This term is one of the 21 Tatsamas. It may be connected with D. maḍal 1 and 2, or with maḍi 1 and 2, or with maḍu 1.

406. râtri,* night. Gt. (p. 527) is right in comparing T. iravu, irâ, iruḷ, M. râ, Tĕ. irulu, rĕ, K. iruḷ, Tu. irku, irḷu, night. See D. ĕrĕ 1, and cf. the Tĕ. rule given s. latĕ (No. 120).—râtri, a superior, a master (Nn. 161). Cf. D. ĕṛĕ 1.

407. rûpa,* form, figure, shape. The Tbhs. of this word are in T. uru, uruva, uruvu, in K. rûpu, rûvu. Gt. (p. 525) and Cl. (p. 465) find the original form of rûpa in T. uṟuppu, a member of the body, the body itself, a form, of D. uṟu, to be, to be firm, etc., both of them adducing the Tĕ. rule given s. latĕ (No. 120). That the two scholars are probably right receives some confirmation from rûpa meaning also "sound, word", which meaning comes from D. uḷi 1 or ĕrĕ 2; cf. D. rû.

408. valakaha,* balakaha, palakaha, avalakaha, white; the white colour (the initial a in avalakaha probably has arisen from a careless, vulgar pronunciation, as probably in apôgaṇḍa; see s. pôgaṇḍa No. 206). Cl. (pl. 460) compares D. bĕḷ 1, and especially T. vĕḷḷĕa, light; a light. Cf. also D. bĕḷaku, bĕḷagu 1 and 2; paḷakanĕ, etc.

409. vasta, a part, a portion. Cf. D. pasu 2, etc.

410. vîci, a wave. The leading idea of this word is not known; could it have been taken from D. bîgu 2, the meaning being "that swells"?—vîci, pleasure. Cf. D. bîgu 2.—viśśi, a ray of light. This word may rest on D. biḷi, bĕḷ 1, bĕḷaku, etc. (see No. 408).—vîci, leisure, interval, rest. Cf. D. biḍatĕ, biḍikĕ, biḍikĕ, (biŏŏu 1 and 2), bigu 1, bisara.—vîci, small, little. Cf. D. piŏu 2.

411. vêla, a garden, a grove; a boundary, limit. This term may be connected with D. bĕli, a hedge, a fence (to form the boundary, etc.), an enclosure for particular cultivation, which D. word may have been formed of bĕṛ, etc.—vêla, passion, emotion, feeling. Cf. D. bĕṭa 2.—vêla, speech. Cf. D. pĕḷ.—vêla, the food of Śiva. Does this word rest on D. bĕḷ 1? (For another vêla see No. 330). Regarding the first meaning of vêla D. ĕlĕ might also be compared.

412. śaṇḍa, shaṇḍa, a multitude, a heap. For the formation of these words there is the Sk verb śaṇḍ, to collect, heap together, which is based on D. sĕḍĕ 1. Cf. also D. sĕḍu and taṇḍa.

413. sûŏa, sûŏana, pointing out, indicating, showing, etc. In Sk. these terms have been connected with sûci, a needle (No. 303). It is, however, more than probable that they are derived from the D. terms given s. ŏupu 1, or from tôŏu, tôṛ, and suṭṭu 2.

414. haṁji, sneezing, a sneeze. This is an onomatopoetic word, reminding one of D. aṟṟi 4 and haṟ (see Additions).

415. hambâ, the lowing of cattle. Cf. D. ambâ, etc., and see D. a 16.

416. hala, halya, ugliness; deformity. Cf. D. pōlē, hōla 1, hōlē, hōlliya, the a of the first syllable being another form of ō (see D. ō 1).

417. halâ, a vocative particle (in theatrical language). See Sk. alâ, etc. (No. 346), D. a 16, and D. ēlâ.

418. havâ, havâva, terms implying "undoubtedly, certainly". See Sk. âm (No. 347), and compare D. aha, etc.

419. hiruk, huruk, without, except. Cf. D. pĕṟagĕ, pŏṟagĕ, hĕṟagu, etc. — hiruk, near. Cf. D. pŭṟĕ 3, etc. — hiruk, amongst. Cf. D. uḷ 2, ŏḷagu, and see D. u 3 and ŏ 3. — hiruk, below. Cf. D. ḻuku, etc. (used as nouns), and see D. ḻ 14.

420. hêḷikĕ (in prahêḷikĕ, a riddle, enigma). Cf. D. pĕḷikĕ, hĕḷikĕ.

VII. Encouragements and aids received.

When about eighteen years ago the Author was requested by the Committee of the Basel Evangelical Mission Society to undertake the compilation of a Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, he rather reluctantly consented, being conscious of the great difficulties connected with the task; but soon commenced the work with pleasure, as he found that several gentlemen, interested in the Dravida languages, were in favor of his doing it. In this respect his acknowledgments are especially due to the late Dr. H. Moegling, the late Dr. A. C. Burnell, M. C. S., M. R. A. S., etc. etc., the eminent scholar and promoter of many oriental literary works, Dr. R. Rost, Librarian to the India Office, etc., etc., Mr. B. L. Rice, C. I. E., M. R. A. S., Director of Archæological Researches in Mysore, and the Missionaries of the B. E. M. S. and other Societies. In course of time the number of European and Native gentlemen who showed a kind interest in the Compiler's labours, increased, so that he has been supported by much friendly sympathy up to this day, for which he expresses his gratitude.

His next grateful acknowledgments must be tendered to the Representatives of the India Office and the Government of Mysore for the liberal pecuniary aid rendered to the Basel Evangelical Mission Society towards the execution of the Dictionary.

He has to thank also the Rev. F. Ziegler of Dharwar, who was kind enough to furnish him with a Kannaḍa-English list of a number of plants growing in Southern Mahratta.

Regarding the language of the Southern Mahratta country the Compiler received considerable assistance from the Liṅgâyta Ayya, Vastrada Šivaliṅgappa, of Hoobly, in consulting him on the colloquial words occurring between p. 1 and 675. His special thanks, however, are due to the late M. C. Šrînivâsa Âčâri, an intelligent and painstaking Brâhmaṇa of the town of Mysore, whom he had in his employ for about three years till his regretted death, with the help of whom he revised and enlarged his MS., and carried it through the press up to page 1072.

Lastly the Compiler is deeply indebted to Mr. Bhâradvâja Šivarâu[1], the faithful chief-corrector of the Basel Mission Press, to the painstaking compositors of that Press, its present superintendent Mr. F. Huber, and his predecessor Mr. G. Hirner.

1) A list containing a few new Kannaḍa (?) words, and additional meanings of some foreign words or their compounds (partly local Tadbhava, Saṁskṛita and Mahratta) and composed chiefly by the kind endeavors of Mr. Bhâradvâja Šivarâu of the Mangalore Press, reached the Author of the Dictionary at the beginning of August, 1893, when his Preface, etc. had already been sent off to the address of the said Press. As the list was a rough one, and its preparation for and sending to the Press and its printing as a supplement would have delayed the publication of the Dictionary, it was, though reluctantly, decided upon to give up the wish of using the list for this first edition of the Dictionary.

VIII. Defects acknowledged.

The Compiler entreats the public to look upon the present Dictionary with an indulgent eye. He is sensible of the many deficiencies, shortcomings and inelegancies it contains, and has to confess that the longer he worked, the more he became aware of his incompetency to satisfy all the wishes of scholars.

Most of the errors and essential omissions hitherto discovered, whether typographical or caused by the Author's own want of knowledge or the inaccuracy and discrepancies in the native authorities consulted or the limited time presenting itself to search the mass of Kannaḍa literature, have, he trusts, been corrected and supplied in the Corrections and Additions. It is earnestly requested to pay careful attention to these Corrections and Additions[1].

And now the Author thanks the great Disposer of all things that He has spared his life to complete this work, hoping the desire will be fulfilled, expressed by his motto "Omnia ad Dei gloriam!"

Tübingen, 22nd July 1893. F. Kittel.

1) Let it be remarked that e. g. the editions of the Bhârata, Râmâyaṇa and a few other works printed at native presses and consulted by the Compiler unquestionably contain sundry mistakes and apparently also some doubtful words. In spite of all difficulties it is believed that few true fundamental Kannaḍa terms likely to be met with in literature and common conversation, have been omitted in this Dictionary; but with regard to Saṁskṛita which is used in ancient and later Kannaḍa works nearly without any restriction and of which certainly not little has been given in this work, it is not anticipated that in reading certain Kannaḍa classics the want of a Saṁskṛita Dictionary will not be felt occasionally. Some Saṁskṛita terms of secondary value not observed by the Author in Saṁskṛita Dictionaries and some peculiar meanings attached to others by popular use and vocabularies will be found in this work.

The Author has been unable to prove the existence of any real Adjectives in Kannaḍa, and has to state that all Saṁskṛita Adjectives and Participles may be used as Nouns in it.

Sometimes many numerical references are adduced under a word partly for the sake of well establishing its existence in the language, and partly for that of examining its meaning and use more thoroughly than the Author's time and strength have allowed.

In numerous cases subscribed consonants have broken off in the printing.

KANNAḌA-ENGLISH

DICTIONARY

ಅ a. 1. The first letter of the Alphabet (ಕೆmd. 12). ಅ ಆ ಮಾರಿದ್ದರೆ ಅಮುಧಾನದೂ ಬೇಡು! ಎಮ್ಮನ್ನೆ (Prv.). Cf. ಒ 1.

ಅ a. 2. The final letter of many primitive Kannaḍa words of masculine and neuter gender, e. g. ಅಣ್ಣ, ಅತ್ತ, ಆದ, ಆತ, ಇತ್ತ, ತೆಂಕ, ದಮುವ, ಪೆಪ, ಪೊಪ, ಪೊಸ, ಮುತ, ಮೂಪ, ಮೊಲ. — The words ಅಕ್ಕ, ಅಮ್ಮ, ಅವ್ವ which are feminine (ಕೆmd. 148), are considered as Tadbhavas.

ಅ a. 3. A termination to form, with or without auxiliary letters, masculine nouns, e. g. ಅಲಗಣ್ಣ (of ಅಲಗಣ್ಣ), ಕೇಸಮಿಯ (of ಕೇಸವ), ಕುಮುವಿಲ್ಲ (of ಕುಮುವಿದ್), ಬಲ್ಲವೆಯ, ಅಗಲ್ಲುರವ (ಕೆmd. 220), ಎಳೆವೇರ, ಕನ್ನುಗೊರಲು, ಬಾಸ್ಕವಿರ, ಪೆಪ್ಪವೆಯ (ಕೆm. 2), ಅಸಿಯ, ಅಸಿಯ, ನಿಪಿಯ (ಕೆmd. 154. 184), ಪಿರಿಯ, ಕೆಲಿಯ, ಕರಿಯ (184), ಎಳೆಯ, ಪಲಿಯ (185). See ಅಕ್ಕಸಾಲೆಯ, ಆಗದ, ಕಣ್ಣ, ಕಾಡ, ಕೂಪ, ಕೆಂಪ, ಕೊಂಗ, ಕೊಪಗ, ಪನ್ನ, ಪಲುಪ, ಪಾಣ, ನಲ್ಲ, ನೂಳ, ಮುಮುಳ, ಮುಕ್ಕಣ್ಣ, ಕೆಗ್ಗಳೆಯ, etc. etc.

ಅ a. 4. A termination of the infinitive, e. g. ಉಪ, ತರ (ಕೆmd. 276), ಪ್ರಯೋಗಿಸ (394). ತರವೇಡ! (278). ರಿಪುಜನರ ಅಧ್ಯಯನಯ ವಿಘಾತದಲ್ ಎನಗ ಬೇಳು (Bh. 1, 8, 56). ಆಮುದೆ ಬರ ಬೇಡು! (2, 13, 34). ಆರ್ಪಮಂ ತಕ್ಕಾಲಕೆ ಈಯ ಬೇಕು (J. 20, 17). ಸಿರಿ ಬಂದ ಕಾಲಕೆ ಪೆಪ್ಪಯ ಬೇಡ (Dp. 22, 3). — In S. Mhr. this form of the infinitive often receives the terminations of the dative, e. g. ಮಾಡಲೆ, ಮಾಡಲ್ಕೆ; ಬರಲೆ, ಬರಲ್ಕೆ; ನಡೆಯಲೆ, ನಡೆಯಲ್ಕೆ (generally pronounced ಮಾಡಲ, ಮಾಡಲ್ಕ, etc.). Cf. ಒಕೆ.

ಅ a. 5. (= ಅಆ?) The termination which is added to the crude form of verbs in the formation of the negative. See ಕೆmd. 73 where the participle ಇರದೆ, when disjoined, appears as ಇರ ಅದೆ. A Mdb. MS. has there the following quotation: ಬಗೆಪುವ ಮಗ ಇನಿಸು ಇರ ಅದೆ. (Cf. T. ಇರಾದೆ, etc. = ಇರ-ಅದೆ, etc.). This ಅ may be the same as ಅ 4, i. e. the ಅ of the infinitive, expressing the idea that the state or action of a verb is yet to be about to be or to become or to come to pass; thus ಇರದು (ಇರ-ಅದು), it is yet to be, i. e. it is not; ಮಾಡನು (ಮಾಡ-ಅನು), he is yet to do, i. e. he has not yet done, or he does not; ಇರದೆ (ಇರ-ಅದೆ), to be even it, i. e. not being yet. Cf. ಅದ 2.

ಅಲ್ al. 1.=ಅಲು 1. That place, that direction, e.g. in ಅತ್ತಲ್ (ಅತ್ತ-ಅಲ್), ಎತ್ತಲ್ (ಎತ್ತ-ಅಲ್), ಮಹುದಲ್ (ಮಹುದ-ಅಲ್; Śmd. 145), ಹಿತ್ತಲ್ (cf. ಅಲಿ 2, ಅಲ್ಲಿ; ಇಲ್ 2, ಇಲ್ಲಿ). 2, that state, condition, or action (in verbal nouns), e.g. ಉಣಲ್, ತಿನಲ್, ಕೊಳಲ್, ಪುಲಲ್; ಉಯ್ಯಲ್, ನೆಯ್ಯಲ್, ಬಯ್ಯಲ್, ಸುಯ್ಯಲ್; ಅರಯಲ್ or ಅರಯ್ಯಲ್ (Śmd. 85. 86); ಕರೆ ಅಲ್ or ಕರೆಯಲ್ (73). In nouns, besides the nominative, it expresses the accusative or the locative (147, cf. ಅಲು 2); or, in verbs (verbal nouns), the meaning of the dative, e.g. ಎನಲ್ ತಕ್ಕಂ, ತಿನಲ್ ಕೊಣ್ಮಂ, ಉಣಲ್ ಬನ್ದಂ, ಕೊಲಲ್ ಬಗೆದಂ (86), ಕಳಲ್ ಪೋದಂ (87; see also 73. 277). Its dative is ಅಕ್ಕೆ (see it separately), e.g. ನುಡಿಯಕ್ಕೆ ಬನ್ದಂ; ಪೇಳಿಕ್ಕೆ ಕೇಳ್ದಂ; ಪಿತ್ತಂಸಕ್ಕೆದೇಱ್ ಸುಡರ್ಗೋರ್ತ್ತರಮಂ! (278); ತೆಂಕ ನಾವ ಮುಖಿಯಕ್ಕೆ ಎನ್ದಂ ಮುನಂ ಬರ್ಕುಮೆ? (164). 3, at the time that, when, whilst. If ಅಲ್ is used in this sense, the subject should be the same for the whole sentence (in opposition to the use of ಆದೊಡಂ, ಎ 6, etc. which require a new subject for the second part of the sentence); it is therefore unclassical to say e.g. ಬಾದಪದ್ಮಂಗಳಲ್ ಒತ್ತುತ್ತಿರಲ್, ಪೂರ್ತ್ರಿಳನ್ಪತಿ ಸುಖಾಸೀನನ್ ಆಗಿರ್ದನ್ ಆಗಳ್;—ಬಯ್ಗಿನ ಕೆಮ್ಪಿಸಲ್ (i. e. ಪಿಸಿಲುಲ್) ಎಳಸರ್, ಎಸೆಮಱ ಅತ್ರಮುತರುಗಳ್ (Śmd. 206. 207). See ಆದೊಡಂ, ಆದೊಡನೆ.—The verbal noun with final ಅಲ್ followed by ಮಹು or ವಡೆ forms a so-called passive, e.g. ಪಾಸ್ತವ್ಯದ ಪಾರಮ್ಪರ್ಯಾನುಷ್ಠಾನಮಹುಮ್ ಆಗಿ ಪೇೞಲ್ ಪಡೆಗುಂ ಫಲಂಗಳ್ ಆಶ್ಚರ್ಯಮಲ್ಲಾ ಕಾರಂ (Śmd. 9); ಪೇೞಲ್ ಪಡೆಗುಂ (61. 156); ಆದನಿಂ ಮಾತಲ್ ಪಱ್ಪುದು (154; see also 157; 299 seq.).

ಅಲ್ al. 2. A suffix occasionally used to express prohibition with regard to the second person (cf. ಆ 5), e.g. ವೆಱಸೊನ್ದಲ್ ಆಣಂ ಬಗೆಯಲ್! (Śmd. 277). ಬನ್ದಲ್ಲಿ ಪೂಗಲ್! ಪೂಗಲ್! ಎನ್ದು ಗಣ್ಡುಗೋಗಿವೆ (277; cf. 74). See Kâvy. I, 5, 38. 39.

ಅಲ್ al. 3. To be fit or proper; to be right or true; to be sufficient; to be desirable, desired, or required; to become, to be (cf. ಅಡಗು 3, ಆಕೆ 2, ಆಯಮ್ಪು, ಆಲ್ 1, ಆಳ್ 2; ನಲ್ 1;—ಇಲ್). It soon became a defective verb of which only the following forms of the negative are in use: 1, ಅಲ್ಲ.=ಅಲ 3, ಅಱ್ತು, ಅಲ್ಲದು (which represent also the lost ಅಲ್ಲಂ, ಅಲ್ಲಯ್, ಅಲ್ಲಂ, ಅಲ್ಲಳ್, ಅಲ್ಲೆಪ್ಪ, ಅಲ್ಲಿರ್, ಅಲ್ಲರ್, ಅಲ್ಲವು; cf. ಆ 6). I am not fit, etc., thou art not fit, etc.; he, or she, or it is not fit, etc., and so on. This term and its equivalents are generally translated by "not", "no", implying difference, denying quality, or nature, and protesting (Abh. P. 9, after 191); the original meanings however are mostly quite suitable. When used in a question, ಅಲ್ asks for assent: is it not fit? is it not so? etc., e.g. ಪೊದಲ್ಲ?—ಪುರುಷೋತ್ತಮಂ ಮನುಷ್ಯಮಾತ್ರಮೆ? ಎನೆ, ಅಲ್ಲ (it is not true) ಎಮ್ಬುದು ಅಧ್ಯಾತ್ಮಾಯರ್ಮಂ (Śmd. 177). ಬನ್ದಲ್ ಈಗಳ್ ವೆಱಸ್ ಅಲ್ಲಂ (i. e. ಅಲ್ಲದಂ or ಅಲ್ಲದವಂ, one who is improperly looked upon as a stranger), ಮುಜಗಮಂ ಕೌದವಾಲುನರಿನೀಳಾಜರಂ ಫೀದುಸೇಪಂ (91). ಗೊರವಲ್ ಅಲ್ಲ ಪೊಗಡಂ is an abbreviation of ಗೊರವಲ್ ಅಲ್ಲದೆ (if Gôrava is not the desired or meant object) ಪೊಗಡಂ (57). ನರಲ್ ಎಂಬಾತಂ ವೆಱಸ್ ಅಲ್ಲ, ಈತಲ್ ಆಗಳ್ತೆಱ್ಪುಂ (184). ಕರುಣಾಮ್ಬುಗಳ್ ಇವ ಅಲ್ಲ! ಉ

U

ಉ u. 1. The fifth letter of the Alphabet (Śmd. 12). As an initial it is often written ಋ.

ಉ u. 2. The final of many Kannaḍa words, e. g. ಕರು, ಕಡು (Śmd. 59), ಮುಡು (63), ಮೂಡು (61. 67), ಒಲವು (62. 247), ಒಳ್ಳು (63), ಕೊಮ್ಮು, ಕಾವು (161), ಕರ್ಪು, ಬೆಳ್ಳು (70), ಕಳವು, ಉಬ್ಬು (247), ಕೇಡು (250), ಉಡು, ಇಡು (96. 185), ದೂಡು (63. 222. 260), ನೋಡು (63. 90. 254. 260), ಪೆಸರು (282), ನಡು (284), ಎದರು (65. 170), etc.

ಉ u. 3. An auxiliary letter to form words with final ಉ of words that, in classical language, end in a consonant, e. g. ಪಲು, ಕಲು, ಮುಳು, ಹುಲು, ಕಡು; ಪಲ್ಲು, ಕಲ್ಲು, ಮುಳ್ಳು, ಹುಲ್ಲು, ಕಣ್ಣು; ಎನ್ನು, ಬೇಡು, ಕೇಳು, ಸಲು, ಸಲ್ಲು; ಪೆಸರು, ಕರುಳು, ಹಾಲು, ಗೇಣು, ಮೇಣು; ಬನ್ದರು, ಆದರು, ತಾನು, ಆದಳು, ಕಡಲು, ಇರುಳು, etc. — Observe especially that when verbs are conjugated in the present and future tenses according to new Kannaḍa, they are always presupposed to end in ಉ, as ಇಬ್ಬಾಯು, ನಡೆಯು, ಕೊಮ್ಮು, ಬರು, ಬೀದು, ಸಾಯು, ದೋಲು, etc.; and that new Kannaḍa verbs like ಕೇಳು, ಬೇಡು, with regard to the P. p., fall under the ikâra-rule of Śmd. 280 (ಕೇಳಿ, ಬೇಡಿ). In Bp. 22, 20 there is the curious form ಕೊಲುಪ್ಪತ್ತ (=ಕೊಲುತ್ತ, ಕೊಲ್ಲುತ್ತ). See ಉಡ 2; ಇ 4.

Although the ಉ in such instances (excepting that of ಸದಮು, etc.) is not radical, i. e. is not that of ಕರು, etc. (59), it has been used like that (cf. 67), e. g. ಅದತ್ತುಪು (B. 5, 187), ಸದ್ಭುತ್ತುಪು (5, 145), ಸದ್ಭುತ್ತುದನ್ನು (5, 98). The author of B. 5 takes this liberty also in Kannaḍa terms, e. g. ಪೊತ್ತುದನ್ನು (189), ನೆನಪುಪು (220). In Śmd. 189 there exceptionally occurs ಉಮುಪಂ (see s. ಉಮು 1); 123 ಉರುವಿಂಗೆ; 124 ಉರುವಿನ (see s. ಉರು 2); 278 ಉಲ್ಲಿನ, ಉಲುವಿನ (see s. ವ); Bp. 48, 3 ಉಮವನಪಮುಮಲ್ಲಿ ಪವಿತ್ರಮ್ ಎನುತ; cf. also ಇತುವೆನ್ದುಮ್ ಇತ್ತುವೆನ್ದುಮ್ ಉತ್ತುವೆನ್ದುಂ (Śmd. 265. 360); ಮೂಸನಸರುದಾಟಿ, ಉಳಿದಾ ಎನುತ (Bp. 46, 59); ಮುಂತುಮುಮುವಿಡಿವಿಮು (J. 3, 37); ಇರು = ಇರ್ (Śmd. 270. 272); ಉಮು = ಉಂ 1. Cf. ಉಮುಂ, ಉಮಂ 1 & 2, ಉಪ್ಪಂ.

ಉ u. 5. (=ವ 2). An auxiliary to form another common nominative of ಅಂ 3 for neuter words with final ಅ, e. g. ಕನಪ (Bp. 16, 22), ಗುಣಪ (17, 9), ಪುಸ್ತಕಪ (B. 2, 1).

ಉ u. 6. A common auxiliary for the formation of an unclassical (see e. g. Śmd. 113 seq.) nominative of masculines, feminines, and neuters with final ಇ or ಎ, e. g. ಅಪ್ಪಿಯೆಯು (Bp. 3, 84), ಸಥೆಯು (5, 59), ಉಗಡನ್ಬೆಯು (11, 4), ವಿಧಿಯು (39, 34), ಆವ್ವೆಯು (47, 40), ತಿರೆಯು (60, 48), ವಿದ್ಯೆಯು (B. 1, 4), ಮೆಯ್ಯು (1, 26), ಗಿರಿಯು, ವಕ್ಷಿಯು (2, 2), ಆಕೆಯು (2, 16), ಪೇಟಿಯು, ರಾಣಿಯು (C.).

ಉ u. 7. An imitative sound. — ಉಉ. One of the notes of the cuckoo (Śmd. 74 Mdh., o. rs. ಉಉಾ, ಒಂ).

ಂ ṁ. 1. The seventeenth letter of the Alphabet. It is an avargîya letter, and has been called the neutral or unmodified nasal. In the Śmd. its names are: bindu, anusvâra, sŏnnĕ or śûnya (19. 20). It belongs to the yôgavâhas (25. 26. 43. 44). The unmodified nasal always precedes the avargîya letters ಯ್, ರ್, ಲ್, ವ್, ಶ್, ಷ್, ಸ್, ಹ್ in the body of a word or in composition, e. g. ಅಂಶ, ಅಂಸ, ಅಂಹಿ, ಸಂಯುಜ, ಸಂರಕ್ಷಣ, ಸಂವಾಸ, ಸಂವಿತ್ತಿ, ಸಂವೆದು, ಪಂಕ್ತಿ, ಸಂಸರ್ಗ, ಸಂಹಿ. Remark: The five vargîya letters ಙ್, ಞ್, ಣ್, ನ್ and ಮ್, that express the nasal sound as modified by guttural, palatal, lingual, dental, and labial pronunciation (Śmd. 24), are often, for the sake of more expeditious writing, replaced by the sign of the unmodified sŏnnĕ. With regard to ಙ್ and ಞ್ this convenient mode of writing has been adopted also for this Dictionary; but the alphabetical places of the two letters have been retained, so that, e. g., ಅಙ follows ಅಚ್ಛ, and ಅಞ follows ಅಜ್ಞ. When in Kannaḍa final ಂ is followed by a vowel, it changes into ನ್, ಮ್, or ವ್ (Śmd. 127. 128; cf. 192. 193).

ಂ ṁ. 2. = ಅಂ (aṁ) 3 q. v., of which it is the grammatical form (Śmd. 114. 115).

ಃ ḥ. The eighteenth letter of the Alphabet, (called visarga, Śmd. 19. 20. 44. 45). It is an unmodified (avargîya) sibilant, and one of the four yôgavâhas (26. 44).
